Steel Wages For 475,000 Raised; C.I.O. Spurs Drive

Increases to Be Effective November 16; Low-Paid to Profit Most.

Lewis' Pittsburgh Parley Is Today

Step Is Not Unexpected, Doesn't Meet Needs; Labor Declares.

By Felix Bruner.

On the eve of a renewed labor union drive to organize the industry, America's biggest steel companies yesterday announced general wage increases effective November 16. The remainder of the industry is expected to fall in line before that date.

Altogether, about 475,000 employes are expected to benefit from the increases, which average about 10 per cent. Employes in the lower wage brackets were given the higher percentage of increase.

The announcement came on the day before the scheduled meeting in Pittsburgh of the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed by John L. Lewis. The primary and immediate objective of the organization is the unionization of steel.

Labor leaders indicated the increases were not unexpected, but they insisted they fell considerably short of their demands. While the steel makers asserted the boosts were arranged with employe representatives, designated by company unions, the labor leaders intimated that their organization activities had forced the action.

U. S. Steel Subsidiaries.

Among the first to announce wage increases were subsidiaries of the huge United States Steel Corporation. These were the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, American Steel and Wire Co., and the Columbia Steel Co., the last named operating on the Pacific Coast. Falling immediately into line was the country's second largest steel maker, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Inland Steel Co., one of the large independents, also announced wage increases.

Among the large companies still to be heard from are the Republic Steel Corporation, Jones & Laughlin, the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. and National Steel Corporation. All of these are primary steel makers. That fabricating companies also will fall in line was indicated by a wage increase announcement of the General Fireproofing Co.

At the same time, outside the steel industry, the Chrysler Corporation in Detroit announced a $4,000,000 bonus to be divided among 67,000 employes.

An unusual feature of the steel wage increase was the provision, in contracts running for a year, that wages would be increased automatically with increases in the cost of living.

Employes at All-Time Peak.

The American Iron and Steel Institute reported that in September the pay roll of steel manufacturers was $65,611,000, compared with $45,893,000 in September, 1935. A total of 526,700 persons were employed in the industry, but only about 91 per cent of them were listed as wage earners affected by the increase. Others were salaried employes. The number of workers on the pay rolls was an all-time high.

The industry itself is operating at about 75 per cent of capacity, which approaches a high figure since the beginning of the depression. With automobile manufacturers going into mass production of their new models within the next few weeks, the rate of steel operation is expected to go up materially.

The wage increase announcement had an immediate effect upon the stock market, where steel shares dropped with the fear that profits, or prospect of profits, would be cut. The big steel companies are not yet paying dividends on common stock.

While there was no complete estimate on cost of the wage increases to the industry, it was said the combined figure for United States Steel and Bethlehem would be about $33,000,000 a year. Bethlehem announced its base labor rate would be increased 5½ cents an hour "with equitable adjustments in other rates of pay." Employe groups in the Carnegie-Illinois Co. recently have asked for increases ranging from 10 to 25 per cent.

Nation's No. 1 Prophet (Jim Farley) Outguesses Roosevelt by Landslide

By Sidney Olson.

The Nation's best guesser—a tall, balk, pink-faced Elk named James Aloysius Farley, yesterday was entitled to a hearty laugh at the election predictions of two of his closest friends, President Roosevelt, and Dr. Emil Hurja, the New Deal's statistical wizard.

ROOSEVELT.

While President Roosevelt ruefully admitted that he had forecast his re-election by 360 electoral votes to 171 for Gov. Alf M. Landon, Farley revealed that Hurja, the background dopester for the Democratic National Committee, had allotted the President only 376 electoral votes and a popular majority of but 3,000,000.

FARLEY.

Yesterday, with the count still incomplete, the President's total popular vote plurality stood at 10,000,000. The final electoral count was 523 to 8.

Prophet Farley, wearing his regular seer and revelator's uniform of a simple double-breasted blue serge suit, admitted yesterday at a press conference that he has now been right four time in a row, and that he thinks he'll quit the political star-gazing business while he's still "hot."

HURJA.

In 1932 Farley predicted Roosevelt would carry all but five States. The President carried all but six, and many observers still contend that only some very deft counting by Republican poll-

President Maps Budget, Studies Vacation Plans

Is Considering Quick Trip to Buenos Aires; Sees Bell on Finances.

As shouts of Washington's welcome died away, and even before a carefree crowd had left off trampling White House flower beds, President Roosevelt settled himself in his leather chair yesterday morning to tackle the affairs of the Nation, with an attack on the budget scheduled for today and a trip to Buenos Aires tentatively slated for next week.

Last night the White House issued a statement saying:

"In order to enable the President to give all of his attention to pressing governmental business prior to his departure on November 17 for his Southern cruise, appointments with the President will be restricted to those dealing solely with executive affairs of the Government.

"The President regrets the necessity of this curtailment."

The President said happily that today's 5-minute dedication address at the statue of Jules Jusserand in Rock Creek Park is his last for a long, long time. However, he is scheduled to make a brief address on a Pan-American broadcast tonight.

Mr. Roosevelt told reporters he and Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell will begin to labor on the budget today, checking over department estimates.

Asked about unofficial reports predicting his sea-voyage vacation would end in Buenos Aires for an appearance at the Inter-American Peace Conference on December 1, the conference opening day, the President outlined two alternative vacation plans.

One of these would be a fishing trip in the Caribbean Sea. The other would be a direct record-speed cruiser voyage on the U. S. S. Indianapolis to Buenos Aires and return, with a probable stop at Rio de Janeiro.

Farley Visit Expected.

Although the President refused to commit himself to the Buenos Aires journey, stating the general conditions would govern his choice, to be announced about the middle of next week, most observers held that unless the maritime strike situation becomes increasingly grave, he will visit the South American republics.

The press conference was a holiday session for the President, who told reporters asking serious questions pertaining to his attitude on

'Stork Derby' Suit Verdict Withheld

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 6 (AP).—Motherhood got a rain check from the Ontario Supreme Court today.

Finding the issues involved in clause 9 of the late Charles Vance Millar's will too complicated to pass upon quickly, Mr. Justice Middleton adjourned the hearing until November 16, leaving 18 prolific mothers no better off financially than they were before.

The justice gave no hint of his opinion as to the validity of the famous "stork derby clause" of the will, but did say "it looks like a contest between the mothers of nine children."

Seven "mothers of nine" were represented in the little courtroom at Osgoode Hall, with 11 others standing by with eight, or less, births to their credit, ready to claim the estimated $500,000 fortune should the "mothers of nine" be unable to prove their claims.

Roosevelt Urges U. S. 'to Share Rising Prosperity' With Needy

Federal Works Plans Leave Wide Responsibility to the Community Chests for Local Welfare, President Says in Mobilization Call.

President Roosevelt last night called upon the Nation to share its "increasing prosperity" with the millions of families and individuals who this winter "will need all the help their local welfare agencies can give them."

Speaking from the White House in a national broadcast on behalf of the Mobilization for Human Needs, the President said, "there is a firm, well-founded public conviction that the recent desperate winters of human need, are, if we hold steadfastly to our course, never to recur."

Although the Federal Government has assumed the task of providing for those who can properly be employed through a work program, the President said "there remain very many other human needs that are the responsibility of the Community Chest agencies."

"This is a partnership—this distribution of responsibility according to the character of the problem," the President continued. "Through the successful operation of this partnership our Nation will meet its needs.

"Community welfare agencies are needed everywhere to provide an adequate answer to these local calls for help which no people can ignore. The Community Chest is a time-tested agency which has grown from experience to assure co-ordinated and effective work by these agencies."

Lauding Community Chests as "the service of supply to our local welfare agencies," President Roosevelt added:

"There is a big and vital job to be done. Federal agencies will do their part. But the job cannot be done unless the community welfare agencies are functioning also."

Expressing confidence the people will respond "more generously than

Social Security Tax Registries To Start Nov. 16

Postoffices Over U. S. to Aid in Registration of 26,000,000.

By Robert C. Albright.

With 45,000 postoffices co-operating, the Social Security board yesterday announced plans for the unprecedented registration of 26,000,000 workers who will share in old age benefits under the social security program, effective January 1.

The herculean task of cataloguing every employer, and determining the number of eligible workers in their employ, will begin on November 16, when employers are sent applications for identification numbers.

A week later, post offices will distribute to millions of employes application forms to be filled in preliminary to assignment of account numbers, an issuance of cards similar to those used by insurance companies for identification purposes. This whole operation is expected to be well under way before tax provisions of the act go into effect January 1.

As the ponderous Federal insurance machine forged slowly ahead, proposed major changes in the law were discussed in several quarters. Renewed efforts for exemption of private company insurance systems are expected when Congress convenes. Labor organizations may attempt to shift the entire payroll tax, on the theory that workers as consumers now must pay both their own and their employers' share, the latter passed on to them in increased prices.

Efforts also may be made to alter present reserve requirements, which eventually would build up the towering fund of $47,000,000,000, but Administration officials are confident no changes will be made in the basic law.

Instructions sent out by the board yesterday explained that beginning January 1, 1942, monthly benefits ranging from $10 to $85 will be paid to participating workers, on reaching 65.

Benefits will be based on work done in this country after December 31, 1936, and before a worker turns 65. To be eligible for benefits, a worker must have earned

Watson's Firm Refused Listing For Securities

Commission Holds Data of Ex-Senator's Company Has Misstatements.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission yesterday issued an order which officials said denied registration to securities of the National Invested Savings Corporation, headed by former Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana.

The order said that whereas a prospectus of the company stipulated that $8.80 of every $11 worth of stock sold should be set aside for the purchase of stock, cash receipts to June 30, 1936, totaled $12,403 and disbursements $12,109.

In addition, it said a balance sheet certified by a Washington accountant listed liabilities as "none," when, as a matter of act, $7,200 was due employes in unpaid salaries.

Yesterday's action was in the nature of refusing to permit the company to amend its original registration statement, which officials said had the effect of suspending the effectiveness of the entire registration.

The registration statement said the corporation was "primarily organized for the purpose of raising funds to purchase 99 per cent" of the capital and surplus stock of the Washington (D. C.) General Life Insurance Co.

Directors, as of June 30, 1935, were listed as James E. Watson, former Republican leader of the Senate; Tom D. McKeown, former Democratic Representative from Oklahoma; S. L. Hilton, holder of the Remington medal, highest honor in chemistry; David Burnett, an official of the Internal Revenue Bureau from 1919-30; Joseph McCoy, administration examiner for the War Labor Board during the World War; Fred W. Buck, former executive secretary of the Federal Dispensary Tax Reduction League; John H. Small, Kelly Kash, George S. Carll, Arthur Clarendon Smith, Albert H. Ladner, jr., Robert L. Ramsey, William Tyler Page, former Clerk of the House; Martin W. Hysong, R. E. Milor, Mark L. Bristol and Gen. David D. Power.

Hoeppel and Son Held in Richmond

Representative John H. Hoeppel and his son, Charles, were arrested in a house in Richmond, Va., J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced early today.

The California Representative and his son have been sought in various parts of the Nation since October 28, when they failed to appear to start serving terms of four months to a year each following their conviction in Federal Court of conspiring to sell an appointment to the Military Academy at West Point.

Pending removal to Washington, the Hoeppels were locked in jail in Richmond, Hoover said. He added that they were captured in a dwelling in the Virginia capital, where they were surprised by Federal agents.

Sleepy Residents Sue to Silence Chimes of Chevy Chase Church

The Angelus Bells, heralds of the devout and inspiration of poets and painters as they pealed their sunrise message down through the centuries, were arraigned yesterday in District Supreme Court as instruments of human torture and destroyers of property values.

Twenty-two Chevy Chase residents joined in telling Justice Joseph W. Cox a story of how domestic and social peace and happiness have fled their homes while they nervously and sleeplessly await the ringing of the chimes.

So touching was their tale that Justice Cox signed an order requiring the Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the Most Blessed Sacrament Church, at Chevy Chase Circle, to show cause by November 12 why he should not be enjoined from ringing the chimes of his church at 7 a. m.

Down through the centuries the chimes of Catholic churches have sounded the Angelus at 6 a. m. to call the faithful to devotion, but last spring, as a concession to the late sleepers in his parish he set the Angelus chimes back to 7 o'clock, Father Smyth explained. There will be no further concessions.

It's not so much the ringing of the chimes that hurts as it is waiting for them to ring, the complainants pointed out.

200,000 Hail President's Return Home

Station Plaza Jammed, Avenue Crowded With Admiring Throng.

Roosevelt Is Forced to Take 3 'Curtain Calls' at White House.

By Eugene Warner.

Wearing an old suit and his irresistible smile, Franklin Delano Roosevelt yesterday rolled into the biggest, noisiest and most enthusiastic welcome the Capital ever gave any President.

Two hundred thousand persons were out to greet him. They saw him wave a battered old hat, heard him speak with a genuine sincerity of his "home-town neighbors," and felt uncontrollable emotional palpitations as they went through police lines and stopped his car on Pennsylvania avenue and then charged the White House in mad, delirious surges.

Two hundred thousand were on the streets, according to estimates, but according to the 200,000 there was only one. The hero of the hour, the symbol of the New Deal, the pride of his countrymen was in the hands of a city which loves him as a good neighbor.

Enjoys Home-Coming.

The Post's invitation of Wednesday morning, in which the paper called upon Washington to give the President the welcome he deserved, touched off a powder-keg of enthusiasm. And he enjoyed it, though it seemed to stun him. He hadn't expected anything so tremendous. Many times along the street of triumph he gulped and looked about him in surprise, as a young man named Lindbergh did in 1927, on that same street.

The President got off his special train at 8:40, feeling sleepy. He had been through a rough battle the last few weeks, and appeared tired. He rubbed his eyes and looked about at the hundreds wormed onto the lower platform at the east end of Union Station. He waved cheerily and spoke a few words into radio microphones. The Navy Band was playing 'Hail to the Chief' nearby.

Dignitaries swarmed around the rear platform. Commissioner George E. Allen, who had put through arrangements for the spontaneous welcome in brisk, efficient style, was on hand and so were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Commissioner Dan I. Sultan. Cabinet members—Secretaries Hull, Wallace, Roper, Miss Perkins, Ickes and Woodring—bustled in and out. The President's car fairly bulged with Democrats. Secretary Wallace, who has been mentioned as the 1940 Democratic nominee, grinned more widely than any of the hundreds of grinners present.

Stands at Attention.

After the President, clad in a gray sharkskin suit, had descended the special runway built for him, he stood at attention while the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner." Hats came ripping off, cheers subsided. Francis Scott Key's song of joy was no song of joy to the President, but a hymn. His facial expression was that of an acolyte hearing the Lord's Prayer, in some dim cathedral. His way of patriotism was deply solemn.

When the anthem was ended, the tumult rose anew. Cheers sprang from everywhere. He shook hands with the blind Pittsburgh Representative, Matthew A. Dunn, who Funds Lacking, Schools Closed in Springfield, O.

Springfield, Ohio., Nov. 6 (AP).—This was the last day of school for more than 12,000 Springfield students and teachers, who complied with a board of education order which shut down the entire system late today because of lack of funds.

Board members ordered the closing after a defeat of a 3-mill special levy at Tuesday's election. They said there was no prospect of reopening before February. Even then, they added, money for operating expenses would be available for only a few months.

Billy Hoover Says President Was Blushing as Multitude Cheered; Receives Executive's Greeting to American Youth.

Apple-cheeked Billy Hoover, who is 11, scored a "beat" on Washington's corps of veteran correspondents yesterday when he secured the first interview with President Roosevelt at the welcome-home.

Billy brought his story to the city editor of The Post soon after the Presidential party had made its triumphant progress up Pennsylvania avenue. He ran into the city room, a "press pass" sticking in the band of his brown slouch hat, with the announcement that he had a story, an interview with President Roosevelt.

Said Billy:

"The President was blushing. There was a great crowd of people. His daughter-in-law had a bouquet of flowers. Every one was cheering. I told the President I was a reporter, (he is a reporter for the Parade of Youth, a magazine for boys and girls published as a section in The Sunday Post) and he said to me:

Funeral Rites For Garfinckel Set for Today

Pneumonia Attack Proves Fatal to Merchant, Philanthropist.

Julius Garfinckel, prominent Washington merchant, civic leader and philanthropist, died at 8:45 p. m. Thursday, his sixty-second birthday anniversary, after a brief illness from pneumonia.

His nephew, William Townsend Pheiffer, arrived here by plane Thursday afternoon from his home in Amarillo, Tex., and was at Mr. Garfinckel's bedside when he died.

For 38 years Mr. Garfinckel has been outstanding in Washington's business and civic life. He was sole owner of Julius Garfinckel & Co., a leading department store that from its inception has had the confidence of the public, and has gained a national and international reputation as "an institution of service," rather than merely a "place of business."

Mr. Garfinckel was a member of a family that originally lived in Louisiana. The line to which he belonged moved to New York, but his family later returned to the Southwest. The son of Harris and Hannah (Harrison) Garfinckel, he was born in Syracuse, N. Y., on November 5, 1874. Since 1898 he has been a resident of the Capital, coming here from Denver.

His first business venture in Washington was the establishment of a women's apparel shop at Pennsylvania avenue and Ninth street.

In 1905, having gained repute as an outstanding merchant of

Rebel Seamen Vote General Strike in East

1,200 Act at Meeting in New York; President Won't Intervene.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 6.—Twelve hundred insurgent seamen, including delegates from principal Atlantic and Gulf ports, tonight voted to turn the Eastern "sit down" marine strike into a general walkout of all seamen.

The insurgents are fighting the leaders of the International Seamen's Union because the latter would not call a strike last week in sympathy with striking seamen on the West Coast.

From a "sit down" sympathy strike the "rank and file" element now has progressed to a strike of its own, with demands for new contracts with shipowners entirely separate from the West Coast quarrel.

Roosevelt Won't Intervene.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, after two trips to the White House yesterday, told reporters that "At this time there is no thought of Presidential intervention in the maritime strike situation."

Miss Perkins was the first caller after the President arrived yesterday, reporting to him with data and views from Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, chairman of the temporary membership of the Maritime Commission, now engaged in efforts to bring about an agreement between the militant strikers and the obdurate owners, neither of

Mrs. Simpson's Royal Romance Was Mirrored For Washington First-Nighters in Play of 1920

Thomas' 'Just Suppose' Here Shortly After Edward's Visit.

If King Edward VIII marries Mrs. Wallis Simpson, their nuptials will provide the "happy ending" to a play that gave Washington a mild shock 16 years ago because it had the Prince of Wales (now Britain's King and Emperor) not only falling in love with an American girl but offering to give up his rights to the throne for her hand.

Although reams have been written in the last few months about the reported romance of his majesty and the former Baltimore belle, the qualifications of the playwright, A. E. Thomas, for a prophet's toga have escaped attention.

For Thomas, even if he was concerned only with fashioning a romantic comedy and had no delusions of clairvoyancy, nevertheless, penned a play in which the leading male character today faces the crisis—at least in public imagination—that the writer cut out for him when Edward was a dashing blade in his twenties.

The three-act play is called "Just Suppose." It was presented at the National Theater the week of May 10, 1920, with Paul Gordon in the role of His Royal Highness, Olive Wyndham as the gallant Virginian who would not let him renounce his birthright that she might be his bride, and Mrs. Thomas Whiffen as the girl's grandmother who was fond of recalling she had danced with King Edward VII, grandfather of the Prince, when he visited Washington.

Since the youthful Prince of Wales had paid his first visit to America's Capital only six months previous to the local premiere of "Just Suppose," the production caused no end of comment in circles of society. Some thought it was too daring, even if the eldest son of King George V was

Mrs. Simpson Cancels Bermuda Trip

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

London, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, vivacious American who has captured the heart of King Edward VIII, has called off her proposed vacation in Bermuda, and will spend the winter in London, The Post's correspondent learned today.

Mrs. Simpson planned the Bermuda trip just before she was granted her divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson, her second husband.

Whether King Edward, who appears determined to become her third husband, persuaded her to abandon the trip and remain in London is a question the answer to which lies with him and Mrs. Simpson. Indications are he did.

Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, D. C., aunt of Mrs. Simpson, is now en route to England. She will be met at Southampton by her niece. She was to have accompanied Mrs. Simpson to Bermuda; now she will spend the winter with her in London.

Government To Withdraw From Madrid, London Hears

Women, Children Flee as Insurgent Forces Enter Capital.

Airport Captured, Radio Station Falls

Moors Beat Defenders Back in Suburbs as Cannons Roar.

BULLETIN.

London, Nov. 7 (Saturday) (AP). On the 114th day of the civil war, the Madrid government decided to abandoned the capital early today.

By the United Press.

Madrid (Saturday), Nov. 7.—Women and children of Madrid began a mass flight from the capital today as rebel troops entered the city. They streamed out by thousands in automobiles and buses, bound for the East Coast. [An Associated Press dispatch from London reported word had been received there that the Spanish government was planning to abandon Madrid immediately. A rebel attack on the capital this morning was indicated—Editor's note.]

The population fully realized the extent of their danger last night as rebels actually penetrated the suburbs.

Early today the battlefield of the Spanish civil war had really shifted to the City of Madrid. While rebel infantry advanced, loyalist batteries in the city began a terrific barrage toward the enemy positions to the south while loyal and rebel planes engaged in air combats over the city.

Madrid has been placed under strict military discipline. The loyalists claimed that they were holding their own against the rebel advance.

Foreigners are seeking refuge in their various embassies. The American Embassy made a public announcement that it would take citizens as house guests for the period of the danger.

Important Points Fall.

Madrid, Spain, Nov. 6 (AP).—Fascist insurgents tonight captured the Madrid radio station at Campamento and occupied Cuatro Vientos airport. The Fascists drove ahead against surprisingly strong and unexpected government resistance.

It was indicated in Fascist field headquarters at Getafe that Gen. Francisco Franco might launch the final assault on Madrid tomorrow morning. The defenders of Madrid tonight showed no signs of fighting.

Earlier in the day government defenders halted an insurgent advance 4 miles south of Madrid. They repulsed a Fascist spearhead drive near suburban Carabanchel with heavy artillery fire. They followed with an infantry counter-offensive.

Fascist cannon poured shells into the capital's outskirts although none fell into the heart of the city. Government gunners replied with shot for shot.

Squadrons of government ships patrolled the skies attempting to drive off the invading planes.

Loyalists Murder Foes.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Nationalist drive on Madrid today resulted in an outbreak of political assassinations throughout Catalonia. The murders were accompanied by "unbelievable atrocities," according to reports reaching the frontier.

In the town of Olot 20 persons suspected of Rightist tendencies were assassinated early today. These 20, in prison since the beginning of the civil war, were dragged out of jail just before dawn and killed. They were beaten with the butts of rifles, then bound and dragged through the streets, tied by ropes to autotrucks. After that they were taken to a cemetery where, half dead, they were riddled by machine-gun bullets.

Most of those murdered were wealthy merchants and bankers.

At Puigcerda Senora Delcor, president of a Catholic organization, and Senora de Gollda, wife of a doctor who already had been executed, were beaten to death.

Artificial Lightning Has 5,000,000 Volts

Pittsfield, Mass., Nov. 6 (AP).—A 5,000,000-volt stroke of artificial lightning, produced by the most powerful current ever developed by man, split tree trunks today in a demonstration before a group of national magazine editors.

The lightning bolt, measured at 50,000 amperes, was produced by Karl McEachron, research engineer in charge of high voltage practice at the local laboratory of the General Electric Co.

Steel Industry Boosts Wages; 475,000 Gain

Action Is Taken on Eve of New Union Campaign; C. I. O. Meets Today.

workers, said in Pittsburgh, according to the United Press, that pressure of the campaign to unionize the industry was responsible for the wage increase, which he branded "a miserly pittance."

The increase, Murray said, was granted "in a last belated attempt to keep workers away from our organization by giving this miserable concession."

"The miserly pittance is not sufficient to meet the needs of steel wage earners," he said. "It will be accepted generally because the wage earners have no organized means of collective bargaining."

There was no indication the drive to organize the workers would be abated, but it was expected it would meet with added resistance. The C. I. O. has about 175 paid organizers working in the industry, and Lewis has insisted the drive is going ahead according to plans. During the political campaign, however, much of the energy of the C. I. O. was turned to the job of re-electing President Roosevelt.

The wage increases were not uniform throughout the industry, agreements with workers varying somewhat with each company, but they followed generally similar lines.

The increases aroused immediate speculation as to whether prices of steel would be boosted. It was said, however, that no price increases could be looked for before the first of the year.

Offsets Depression Cuts.

The new wage boost only offsets depression cuts. A cut of 10 per cent was made in October, 1931, and one of 15 per cent in May, 1933. In August, 1933, wages were increased 18½ per cent, and in April, 1934, they were boosted 10 per cent. In 1934 working hours were reduced.

Typical of the new wage arrangements was this plan being followed by subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation:

1. An adjustment in wages averaging 10 per cent, effective November 16 to be in effect for one year and subject to modification or extension on its expiration.

2. Basic common labor rate now fixed at 47 cents an hour to be increased to 52½ cents. Basic mill turn labor now at 48½ cents to be increased to 54 cents per hour.

3. Adjustment of wages up or down according to 5 per cent swings in the Bureau of Labor Statistics index. The index as of July 15, 1936 was at 82.0 (which is computed by basing the average index for the years 1923-1925 as 100 per cent). The 10 per cent over all wage adjustment on November 16, the corporation said, "will therefore cover, in advance, a possible rise in the index to 90.2. If during the year, the cost of living index should rise to 94.7, then a further five per cent increase in wage levels will be made. If, however, the index, having reached 90.2 should decline to 85.7, there would automatically be made a general wage decrease of 5 per cent from the levels established as of November 16."

In addition to considering the steel organization campaign, C. I. O. officials in their Pittsburgh meeting are expected to discuss their attitude toward the American Federation of Labor, with particular attention to the convention of the federation opening in Tampa, Fla., November 16. It is not expected the 10 suspended unions included in the C. I. O. will make any effort to seat delegates in the convention or to prevent the convention permanently expelling them from the federation.

This event may shape the future course of developments, not only in the field of organized labor in this country, but also in industry generally.

WALTMAN.

It can be argued that the steel makers would not have granted this general increase effective November 16 had it not been for the efforts of John L. Lewis to organize the steel workers and the threat which he raised against the steel manufacturers' company unions.

Furthermore, it may be argued that the steel makers realized that the overwhelming popular support given to President Roosevelt would strengthen Mr. Lewis. Or it may be argued that the steel industry planned before the election to make these increases after that event.

Some observers suspect that the real purpose of the steel makers is to spike the drive for unionization of their industry which Mr. Lewis is preparing to lead. By partially yielding to their workers, the steel barons, it is contended, have eliminated some of the grievances which Mr. Lewis proposed to exploit against them.

Whatever the motive which inspired the steel manufacturers, their action is smart and intelligent, not only from their own viewpoint but also from that of the country generally. They have displayed a realism which has been often lacking in the past.

There are two ways for the steel industry to deal with Mr. Lewis. One is to declare that labor had no just grievances; that the manufacturers would not be dictated to by labor leaders; that they would fight any effort made to unionize the industry. This line of action, which represents the traditional attitude of the steel industry, would have played right into Mr. Lewis' hands.

The other course of action is to determine as accurately as possible the justice of the grievances of the workers and then to go about correcting them as quickly and as far as possible. That the steel makers apparently have taken this course is the more surprising in view of the fact that none of the big steel companies is paying dividends on common stock.

Thus the workers get a pay increase while the holders of common shares have to wait a little longer to get any return on their investment. That does not sound like the action of economic royalists or industrial tyrants. Yet in the long run the action just taken will be profitable to owners as well as workers.

Observers for months have believed that a bitter, perhaps prolonged, strike in the steel industry was a possibility of the near future. If the pay increases just granted are instrumental in avoiding that prospect, then despite the heavy increased labor cost involved, the steel industry would save money—for it would cost that much and more to fight a strike, not to mention the intangible losses to the Nation resulting from the economic dislocation. The steel barons seem to have learned that much.

Perhaps this action of the steel industry is a forecast that the industrial and financial leaders of the Nation have taken to heart some of the President's jibes at them. In any event, the granting of the pay increases adds to the "era of good feeling" which has descended over the political world since the President's re-election.

Now that the heat of the campaign is over, it might be a very salutary thing if everyone would reread the President's campaign speeches, without fervor, partisanship or prejudice—read them in an effort to determine their truth and the extent to which the criticism of economic royalists" was jurstified.

Undoubtedly the President in his present mood—which, incidentally, is Mr. Roosevelt at his best—would find that in many instances he went too far, that he said things which could not be fully sustained by ascertainable facts and that on occasion he failed to discriminate as finely as he might have between the good and the bad.

But at the same time the financial, industrial and business leaders of this country also would find that there is much truth in some of the criticisms he leveled at them. If they are honest with themselves, they would find that too often they have sacrificed their fiduciary obligations to the Nation as a whole to promoting unfairly their individual interests

They also would find a great deal of truth in Mr. Roosevelt's contention that communists and radicals are not made by governments fighting special privilege and by those seeking to help the downtrodden, but by those either blind or indifferent to the rights of others.

A great opportunity stands before this country if all elements in the population would join in meeting each other half way and thus co-operating to solve some of the problems harassing the Nation, just as all elements in the population joined in re-electing President Roosevelt. The steel makers have made the first gesture in that direction. If others follow, then indeed, America will have entered on an "era of good feeling."

wages for at least one day in each of five different calendar years, and total wages must be $2,000 or more. Lump-sum payments, amounting to 3½ per cent of their total wages, will go to persons who have reached 65 but do not qualify for monthly benefits.

Reducing the complex law to its simplest terms, the board announced yesterday that the work of building up necessary records for administration of benefits "will be conducted with all possible convenience to employers and employes." All persons working for salaries or wages will ultimately be reached, excepting only those engaged in agriculture, domestic service in private homes, government service and a few other occupations exempt from the act.

To handle the vast rush of applications and record basic data, approximately 300 additional permanent employes will be hired by the board here, and 400 or more in Baltimore. Both employers and employes are being urged to refrain from making inquiries until receipt of official forms and instructions.

Benefits will be financed by a tax of 1 per cent on the first $3,000 of employes' wages, beginning January 1, and employers must contribute an equal amount for each employe. In steps of one-half of 1 per cent, this tax will be graduated upward every three years until it reaches 3 per cent.

When the law was being drawn, the American Federation of Labor contended this was "double-taxation" of the employe, but failed in its effort to shift the entire pay roll tax to employers. Proposals to renew labor's drive for amendment will be made at the Tampa convention of the A. F. of L.

Instructions Sent Out.

Instructions on collection of the tax have been sent by the Internal Revenue Bureau to District collectors.

First forms to be distributed November 16 will be the "Employer's Application for Identification Number," which will ask them to describe their business, list the number of wage earners employed, and to name the headquarters office, if their shop is a branch.

These forms must be returned by November 21, and beginning November 24, employes will receive through their employers forms marked "Application for Social Security Account Number." A few questions will be asked, such as age, sex, parents' names and the business of their employers.

Accounts for All.

On the return of these application forms, postage free, the Social Security Board will set up an account for each eligible person, identification cards will be furnished to workers, bearing the number of the employe's account. Each will contain a printed warning to preserve the card, because "it shows the account number used in keeping records of your social security benefit rights under Federal and State laws." Employe cards will be of white cardboard with red letters on a blue background.

For classification purposes, both employer and employe identification numbers will be divided into three sections, keyed for different parts of the country, for general employment groups and for individuals.

"In these accounts," the board stated yesterday, "all of the 26,000,000 persons estimated to be eligible will, starting January 1, 1937, begin storing up cash values payable to the worker at 65 or to his family if he dies before reaching the age of 65. These cash values will at all times be substantially larger than the worker's own contributions under the social security act."

Keep this card. It shows the account number used in keeping records of your Social Security Benefit rights under Federal and State Laws. Keep a record of this number as you might lose the card. Mention the number in all letters regarding your account.

Address inquiries concerning Unemployment Compensation (if there is a law in your State) to the State agency administering such law. Address inquiries concerning Federal Old-Age Retirement Benefits (not State Old-Age Assistance or Pensions) to the nearest office of the Social Security Board.

"Fortunately, this appeal comes at a time when the national income is rising and the number of Americans left defenseless against poverty and hunger is diminishing."

Public response to Community Chest appeals has never been adequate, the President declared, and added:

"But step by step, with the partnership of local and Federal agencies—Government aid and private charity—our people are approaching the goal of social security for all.

"Nineteen thirty-six is our opportunity for another advance. May each and every one of us, in every community in every State, contribute our share in answer to this great appeal to meet human needs."

Following the President's address—the first delivered to the Nation since his re-election—Gerard Swope, chairman of the 1936 Mobilization for Human Needs, responded from Cleveland with the declaration that funds are needed to restore human morale that has been impaired or lost.

"Now that the material well-being of our country is rising and fear has given way to optimism and hope," Swope said, "attention must be directed and funds provided for the spiritual health and character building needs that in the last few years, to a certain extent, have been relegated to secondary place.

Sees Brighter Future.

"We are approaching the end of 1936. People generally have a feeling of thankfulness that the difficult milestones have been passed and are looking forward with a brighter expectation to the future."

Swope said the high standard of living in America must include "a spiritual concept—indeed, the cooperation and mutual helpfulness of human beings is its finest expression."

Services offered by agencies, Swope continued, are out of all proportion to the money they cost.

"Papers on economics and charts may show the peaks, the slough of despond and the way up and out to recovery," he said, but they cannot show the human morale that has been impaired or lost.

"We know it and we know too that for our own self-respect and satisfaction this lost or impaired morale must be restored."

Arms Fund Voted.

Bucharest, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Cabinet Council today voted to take 4,000,000,000 leu ($28,000,000) of the national banks' entire treasury of 11,000,0 leu for rearmament.

Boy, 11, Scoops Old Reporters In Interview

Young Billy Hoover Is First to Talk to Roosevelt at Home-coming.

America to have my greeting.'

"That's about all."

Billy told the city editor that he got up early and went over to the Union Station to join the thousands of welcomers.

When the President's car came out of the station and stopped beside the Columbus Statue, Billy said he flashed his press card on a policeman, who let him go over to the car. He climbed up on the running board and spoke to the President, who smiled at him.

"He was blushing," said Billy. "First he was white and then he was red."

Did you blush? Billy was asked.

Billy blushed and said yes.

Billy laughed when he told the city editor his name was Hoover. He thought it was funny a Hoover should interview a Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Supporter.

How long have you been a Roosevelt man? Billy was asked.

"Well, just since I have been thinking about politics," he replied, "about two or three years, I guess."

The boy's reporter's card was issued by the Parade of Youth, the youngsters' feature of The Washington Post.

"But," said Billy, "they won't mind if I give my news to The Post first."

And then: "Say, can I use your phone?"

Permission granted, Billy dialed his boss at the Parade of Youth office, gave him the story, and then said good-by.

But the city editor called a photographer who took a shot of Billy with his press pass in his hat.

Billy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hoover, of 1428 Thirty-fifth street northwest. He is in the sixth grade at Holy Trinity School. His middle name is Edward.

Ship Again in Trouble.

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—The British freighter Afghanistan was reported in difficulty in the midatlantic tonight for the second time in 10 days. Lloyds reported the vessel's owners had received word the 5,616-ton ship had lost its rudder and that the freighter Cairnglen was standing by. Its position was given as 900 miles from St. John's, N. F.

Upshaw Improved.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 6 (U.P.).—William D. Upshaw, former Prohibitionist candidate for the Presidency, was reported greatly improved late today though still not completely past danger at Biltmore Hospital, where he underwent a major abdominal operation Saturday.

a Constitutional amendment to regulate labor conditions, that they shouldn't spoil an otherwise happy day.

Puffing at a cigarette in the eight-inch holder he always uses, the President, after cheerfully ridiculing his own ability to forecast election results, declared the continued speech-making of the campaign had made his voice a little raspy; that more than 12,000 congratulatory telegrams had been received; that the stacks of letters hadn't even been opened yet; and that he probably won't return to the White House after his next departure until about December 13 or 14.

Gives Possible Itineraries.

His alternative sea trips were outlined as follows:

1. Leaving Charleston, S. C., on a cruiser about November 17 or 18 for a trip to windward of the Leeward Islands east of Trinidad and then west to the Central American coast, and return to either Pensacola, Mobile or New Orleans.

2. Leave Charleston, proceed directly to Trinidad, refuel and head for Buenos Aires with but one stop, probably at Rio de Janeiro. This trip, which he probably will make, would be taken at top cruising speed of 24 to 25 knots for a new record voyage and return, he said.

The President did not indicate whether he definitely will make an address at the opening of the peace conference, but it was believed pressure from executives of the other 20 nations' delegations would make such an address mandatory.

His profound interest in peace and in the international safeguards and mechanisms by which it can be maintained all indicate he will make a significant addition to his "good neighbor" policy of reciprocal trade agreements, and the neutrality law.

Speculation continued on the final form of the budget when the President and his advisers finish it in late December.

At present most observers agree the budget will follow that of last January in being in balance with the exception of the appropriation for relief. Some departments may be pared considerably, however, in accordance with the view that much emergency action is now unnecessary and can be dispensed with.

These reduced expenditures may be somewhat offset, however, by the long-range spending programs for national defense. The President, known as a "big Navy" advocate, is not far behind in his belief in large outlays for the Army. Expenditures for the two combined are expected to touch the $1,000,000,000 mark.

Authority for the Public Works Administration expires next June, however, and may be discontinued. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation's lending powers now are slated to expire January 31. No final decisions have been made as yet as to advisability of continuing either.

Farley Choices Beat Roosevelt By a Landslide

watchers in Pennsylvania took that State out of the Roosevelt column that year.

In 1933, at the time of the passage of the repeal amendment to the Constitution, Farley prophesied repeal would be effective before the end of the year. Such close students of the country's alcohol situation as Henry L. Mencken and George Jean Nathan predicted ratification of repeal by the nation's legislatures would consume most of six or seven very dreary years, and added politely that Farley was crazy. History shows he was right.

Predicted Increase.

In 1934, Farley predicted the Democrats would increase their already large majorities in both House and Senate. Once more the reputable crystal-peekers hooted. The history of all Administrations has been, they said, that once the honeymoon is over, the opposition comes back in Congress. But once more Farley was right.

This year Farley reluctantly admitted the Democrats might lose Maine and Vermont, but he insisted, directly in the face of all the master-minds, that they would gain still more House and Senate seats. Last Tuesday showed that Farley, almost uncannily, had indicated the extent of the Democratic thunderbolt's national reverberations.

The President, meanwhile, revealed his four guesses as follows:

On January 30 he forecast the Democratic electoral vote as 325, the Republican at 206.

On June 5, just before the Republican convention, he set the Democratic vote at 315, the Republican at 216.

On August 2 he wrote, "FDR—340; AML—191."

On Sunday, November 1, he added his final guess: "FDR—360; AML—171."

In revealing his bad guesses, the President laughed and said he apologized for them. A correspondent asked: "What frightened you?"

"I guess it was just my well-known conservative tendencies," smiled Mr. Roosevelt.

President Aims To Keep Hands Off Ship Strike

whom will concede ground despite the gradual paralysis of shipping around the Nation's coasts.

The President discussed the situation at his weekly Cabinet meeting yesterday, in a session which lasted two and one-half hours, and then held Secretary Perkins after the other members had departed, in order to hear further news of the deadlock.

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, after a long distance telephone conversation with Secretary Perkins, abandoned his plans to fly back to Washington from San Francisco, where he has endeavored without success to bring owners and union workers together.

With more than 300 ships tied up, and thousands of men out on strike and with coastwise and foreign commerce flagged down to a near standstill, the gravity of the situation has engaged the efforts of three Government departments—Commerce, Labor and Postoffice. Mails are being shipped by foreign vessels; much merchandise is piled up on docks around the country, and no progress has as yet been made in conciliation efforts.

Miss Perkins told reporters she was particularly anxious to obtain the release of food ships bound for Alaska, now tied up at docks. She said that with winter ice closing in fast at Alaskan ports, "the situation is quite serious."

Strike Foes Released.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Six striking seamen raided a midtown hotel room today and tried vainly to invoke a new Federal antistrike-breaking statute against the 226-pound Sam (Chowderhead) Cohen and two of his aids.

Cohen, Samuel (Chink) Tanner, 53, and George Mallen, 59, were accused by the men who burst into their room of violating the Byrns law, making it a felony to transport men across State lines for the purpose of interfering with peaceful picketing.

All three were released after an hour's questioning by Gregory Noonan, chief of the criminal division of the United States Attorney's office. Noonan said he found no violation of a Federal statute.

Other developments on the New York waterfront:

1. The seamen's defense committee, sponsoring the insurgent "sit down" strike on the East Coast, announced 16,000 men were affected by a tieup of 227 ships in Atlantic and Gulf ports.

2. Picketing was established in front of the Grace Line pier on the North River and the defense committee announced that all Brooklyn docks were being picketed.

3. Counsel for the strikers applied for a Supreme Court order directing David E. Grange, a vice president of the International Seamen's Union, which has denounced the strike as unauthorized, to submit to questioning relative to an alleged defalcation of $143,000 in union funds.

Unprecedented Move.

Los Angeles, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—An unprecedented move to crack the seamen's tieup of Los Angeles Harbor through manipulation of a Federal court suit, was instituted tonight in an effort to save perishable fruit aboard affected vessels.

Otis McAllister & Co., banana importers, sought a Federal court order from Judge Paul J. McCormick to force shippers to deliver a cargo of 1,462 stems of bananas from the Canal Zone.

The fruit brokerage firm named three shipping companies defendants, but the effect would be to require them to deliver the consignment in spite of waterfront picket lines.

Boston Strikers Weaken.

Boston, Nov. 6 (AP).—A "sit-down" strike by insurgent members of the International Seamen's Union weakened in Boston tonight, left only four intercoastal vessels tied up and led to a claim by a rival faction that the backbone of the strike had been broken.

Negotiations at Standstill.

San Francisco, Nov. 6 (AP).—Peace negotiations in the maritime strike remained in a stalemate here today. A few ships managed to leave strike-affected Eastern and Gulf ports, but a few others became strikebound.

Bradley Heights Citizen in Trouble Even in Jail Cell

Even in a cell, Ernest F. Beach, 29, of Bradley Heights, Md., apparently can't avoid trouble, police records yesterday revealed.

He was brought into Police Court on two assault charges and a drunk and disorderly charge after his arrest yesterday by Private W. J. Gaylor, of the First Precinct.

One of the assault charges was preferred by Wendell McDaniels, who told police he was beaten by the defendant while both were prisoners at the First Precinct.

The drunk and disorderly charges were dismissed. Beach asked for a jury trial on the two assault charges.

Jusserand Seat ToBeDedicated At Rites Today

President Will Participate in Memorial Program for Diplomat.

President Roosevelt will give the address of dedication today as the Jusserand Memorial Bench, erected in memory of the famous French Ambassador, Jean Jules Jusserand, is unveiled along the banks of Rock Creek.

The exercises will begin at 2:30 this afternoon. Attending besides the President, will be Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Mme. Jusserand, widow of the statesman, who came to this country expressly for the rites, and now is a guest at the French Embassy.

M. Jusserand represented his republic in the United States from 1902 until 1924, and was one of the most beloved envoys ever sent to Washington.

He was an especial friend of President Theodore Roosevelt, and together they often walked in Rock Creek Park, along what is now Beach drive, where the memorial has been placed.

It was during M. Jusserand's long period of service here that cordial relations between the world's two greatest republics were cemented.

When the World War came he was a powerful influence in Washington, and when the United States entered the conflict, his counsel frequently was sought by the leaders in the Wilson Administration.

He was the author of many books on various periods in English history. His "History of English Literature," written in English, is considered a rare accomplishment.

The memorial which will be dedicated today is a gray granite, semi-circular bench, designed by Joseph Friedlander, New York architect.

It was erected through private subscriptions of friends, and is the first memorial ever to be built to any of the diplomatic corps.

William Franklyn Paris, noted New York decorative architect, is chairman of the Jusserand Memorial Association, which is responsible for the construction of the memorial.

4 Washington Men Indicted in Fraud

Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 6 (AP).—Four Washingtonians were indicted today on charges of obtaining money through false pretenses, for what State police claimed was an oil stock and oil land "swindle" through which Miss Carrie E. Tawney, Gettysburg dressmaker, lost nearly $13,000.

The men are Franklin M. Plummer, who has been in jail since September for lack of $10,000 bail; Henry A. Johnson, free in $2,500 bond; James L. Skinner, at large, and Paul Prescott Brewington, in jail at Washington, D. C., upon conviction of false pretense charges. Adams County authorities have lodged a detainer against Brewington.

Plummer and Johnson were listed for trial next week.

International Thief Is Awarded $3,500

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—A plea of "dire need" won $3,500 today for Eddie Guerin, who gained a tidy fortune and international notoriety by picking pockets and cracking safes.

Probate Judge John F. O'Connell approved an advance of that amount on Guerin's claim to one-fifth of the $67,000 estate of a half-sister.

The petition was filed by his counsel, William S. Kleinman.

The attorney reported his client, now 75, husband of an English woman and the father of four children, was spending his declining days quietly in London.

Kleinman explained Guerin could not come here because he might be extradited to France and packed off to complete a sentence at the French penal colony, Devil's Island.

Guerin became widely known as the first man to escape from there. That was in 1905. He was sent to the island after he had robbed a bank messenger of 250,000 francs at Marseilles, France, and had obtained 30,000 francs by blasting open a safe in Paris.

Bankers to Hold Joint Convention

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Officers of the Virginia and West Virginia Bankers Associations announced after a conference here yesterday that their associations would hold a joint convention at White Sulphur June 24, 25 and 26, 1937.

Arrangements for the meeting were announced by J. B. Dey, jr., president of the Virginia Bankers Association and senior vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, Norfolk, and E. G. Otey, president of the West Virginia Bankers Association and president of the Bluefield National Bank at Bluefield, W. Va.

The West Virginia association held its 1936 convention at the Homestead, Hot Springs.

Will of Cochran Filed in New York

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Relatives, friends and employes were named beneficiaries in the will of the late Thomas Cochran, partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., filed in Surrogate's Court today with no stipulation of the value of the estate.

The principal beneficiaries of the residuary estate named were a brother, William, of Englewood, N. J.; a sister, Louise Cochran Savage, of St. Paul, Minn., and a sister-in-law, Margaret Davis Cochrane, also of St. Paul. The two women also receive $300,000 life trusts and the brother a $200,000 trust.

Approximately $100,000 is bequeathed to friends and employes.

Series on First Ladies To Appear in The Post

By the Associated Press.

The personalities and activities of First Ladies of the land from Abigail Adams to Eleanor Roosevelt are revealed in a series of 11 articles by Bess Furman, of the Washington staff of the Associated Press.

The first will appear in the Sunday Washington Post tomorrow.

The series will continue each Sunday until the inauguration and will be illustrated by photographs of the First Ladies' portraits in the White House—the first time such a collection has been printed.

The political activity or inactivity of these women and the social problems they had to face are brought to light in the series.

Abigail Adams is known far and wide as the White House mistress who hung the family wash in the stately East Room. Miss Furman tells why her fame should not rest on that unconventional act and the part Mrs. Adams played in her husband's Administration.

Atlantan Kills Wife, Daughter, Self in Quarrel

Son, Seriously Wounded, Calls Police to Scene of Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Nov. 6.—Rifle shots killed three members of the family of L. Neal Owen, 40, and dangerously wounded 11-year-old Neal, jr., after a breakfast table quarrel today.

County Policeman W. C. Tumlin and B. C. Cawthorn said Owen killed his wife and daughter, shot his son, who summoned officers, and then fatally wounded himself with a small caliber rifle. Owen died at a hospital. Physicians said they did not expect the boy to live.

Mrs. Elsie Moore Owen, 37, the wife, was a bank stenographer. Owen, a World War veteran, was a floor finisher.

All the victims were shot through the head.

Police found the body of Mrs. Owen, clad in pajamas and a bathrobe, lying beside the kitchen refrigerator. The daughter, attired in blue slacks and a brown corduroy jacket, fell near the range. Owen was dying near the breakfast table across the room.

Friends said Owen had been in ill health, but that the family apparently had been tranquil.

50 Seized in Rumania On Communist Charge

Bucharest, Nov. 6 (AP).—Fifty persons, the majority lawyers, were arrested in Rumania today by police who afterward announced they had uncovered "intimate connections" between Communist movements in France and Rumania.

The arrests were made in Bucharest, Iasi, Brasov and Cernauti.

The police moved after a manifesto of the antisemitic iron guard warned King Carol and his government that they must "guarantee with their heads" against Rumania participation in a war on the side of bolshevism.

TVA Contends One-Suit Test Not Sufficient

Court Told Utilities' Action Too Vague; Dismissal Motion Studied.

By the Associated Press.

Cookeville, Tenn., Nov. 6.—The question of whether the vast power program of the Tennessee Valley Authority can be tested in a single lawsuit was raised today by Government attorneys seeking dismissal of such a suit brought by 19 private utilities.

The utilities suit challenged the power program chiefly on the ground of constitutionality. The Government motion attacked the utilities' bill as being too vague and failing to present a specific issue for court action.

The suit has become recognized as the principal attack of private power interests on the program of Tennessee River development undertaken by the TVA.

Judge John J. Gore took the motion under advisement, promising a decision "as soon as is at all possible."

John Lord O'Brian, attorney for TVA, insisted that "the power program is a nonjusticiable issue." He argued that any suit brought against the authority should be directed against a specific act which has caused or threatened to cause damage to a particular defendant. He asserted that some of the 19 complainants had no legal basis for suing the TVA.

"We contend," he told the court, "that the plaintiffs can challenge definite and concrete acts which interfere with a particular plaintiff, but cannot challenge the power program as such."

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War and chief of counsel for the utilities, declared in rebuttal that the widespread operation of the TVA makes possible a departure from precedent in court procedure, if such should be necessary in this case.

"Here we have an unusual situation," Baker said. "Never before in the history of the United States has anything like this (the TVA) happened. This is an unprecedented invasion of the States by the Federal Government."

The directors of the TVA, he asserted, are "like Robinson Crusoe—the lords of all they survey and their right there is none to dispute."

"We cannot enjoin President Roosevelt's dream," Baker told the court, in discussing TVA arguments against attacking the program as a whole, "but when the dream becomes a concrete fact we can enjoin it. We cannot enjoin President Roosevelt's policy, but when that policy becomes an actual threat we can enjoin it."

French, British Ignore Italy's African Empire

Non-Recognition Stand on Ethiopia Follows Duce's Mediterranean Threat.

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 6.—Great Britain and France, irked by Premier Mussolini's strong speech at Milan last Sunday, have decided not to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia at any time in the predictable future, it was learned tonight.

London and Paris, it was learned, believed that the Italian dictator went out of his way to slight France and Great Britain, and there is deep resentment in the two capitals.

Mussolini had warned Great Britain that Italy was ready to fight, if necessary, rather than acknowledge British control of the Mediterranean. He also had expressed resentment over France's failure to recognize Ethiopia as Italian territory. Consequently, the newly appointed British and French ambassadors to Rome are delaying their departure.

The French Foreign Office, meanwhile, is making arrangements to evacuate the 160 Sikh guards in its legation at Addis Ababa. Since the city fell last summer, they have been kept in the compound for fear that if they were allowed outside there might be "incidents" involving them with Italians.

The French and British also have decided to maintain a policy of close co-operation with regard to the civil war in Spain, it was learned.

Commercial Pact Signed.

Rome, Nov. 6 (AP).—A commercial accord, restoring economic relations between Italy and Great Britain broken off during the Ethiopian war, was signed tonight.

Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Italy, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, affixed their signatures to the agreement, which resulted from long negotiations.

Judge Holds Service On Coughlin Not Legal

Cleveland, Nov. 6 (AP).—Common Pleas Judge Lee E. Skeel held today the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin was not legally served here October 26 with papers in an ouster and accounting suit filed by J. H. O'Donnell, of Pittsburgh, against the priest and the National Union for Social Justice.

The effect of the ruling was to obviate a contempt of court motion filed by counsel for O'Donnell when Father Coughlin did not appear for a deposition hearing last week.

2 Cubans Held For Shipment Of Explosives

One Seized at Macon, Ga., Another at Miami by U. S. Justice Agents.

Arrest of two Cubans on charges of shipping explosives from the United States to their native land in violation of a Presidential order forbidding such shipments was announced by the Federal Bureau of Investigation last night.

The prisoners registered as Candido de la Torre Farrara, apprehended yesterday at Macon, Ga., to be arraigned for removal to Jacksonville, Fla., and Jose Urquizo, seized at Miami for arraignment there today.

In its announcement of the capture, the Department of Justice said that on May 30 and August 24 "a number of boxes labeled 'auto parts' was shipped from Jacksonville to Havana."

Stored Underground.

It added these were taken to a farm in Jaimanitas, Cuba, and placed in an especially constructed underground storeroom.

After confiscating two of the boxes, Cuban authorities found they contained sulphur and chlorate of potash, according to the announcement.

"Part of the explosive so received was used in the dynamiting of a building occupied by the offices of the newspaper El Pais on September 20," it continued.

Blast Attempt Foiled.

"An attempt was also made to dynamite the premises occupied by the newspaper Diario de la Marino," the announcement added. "However, this attempt was frustrated."

Complaints were filed in Jacksonville October 21, it said, against the two men, charging them with having violated the provisions of the President's proclamation," and with violating a Federal statute making it "unlawful to present packages containing explosives or other dangerous articles to a common carrier when the true contents of the packages are not marked correctly."

The department said the full names of the Cubans were determined after the complaints were filed.

Leash Ruled a Weapon.

Paris, Nov. 6 (AP).—A dog leash without a dog on the end of it is a weapon, the French court of appeals ruled today. The court upheld the three-month jail sentence given Louis Debrand, arrested for carrying a leash during a Communist-Fascist street fight October 4.

Mexico Oil Firms Appalled by Costs Of Union Program

Mexico City, Nov. 6 (AP).—Officials of oil companies of which employes threaten to strike declared tonight demands of workers would mean "surrendering the managements to the unions."

Informed persons asserted compliance by the oil companies, many of which are foreign controlled, would cost them $500,000,000 pesos ($138,000,000) annually.

Among the demands of the Oil Syndicate (the union) were these:

That the companies be required to provide first-class round-trip passage to any place in the world that an employe might select for his annual vacation, which might last up to ten weeks.

That an employe be allowed to select his own vacation date and be paid double for the time he works beyond that date if the company finds it necessary to delay his vacation.

That the companies furnish rent-free houses.

That the basic wage scale be virtually tripled.

That all except the topmost executives be union members.

Earl Plans to Sail; Conciliation Fails

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Earl of Carnarvon, son of the nobleman who opened the tomb of King Tut, and the Hon. Tanis Guinness Montagu just weren't at home to anyone today. Their romance evidently had gone the ill-fated way of everything touched by the "curse of the Pharoahs."

They were to have been married in Baltimore yesterday, but the wedding failed to take place. They raced back to New York, and now the mystery of "why" is as deep as that which seems to link the Carnarvons, and all who aided the late lord in his excavations, to tragedy.

After attempts at reconciliation were reported to have failed, Lord Carnarvon booked passage on the liner Europa, to sail tonight for Europe. The marriage would have linked two of Europe's wealthiest families.

Detective Testifies Against Mrs. Clark

Los Angeles, Nov. 6 (AP).—A private detective testified today he had seen wealthy Mrs. William A. Clark 3d and Michael Fitzpatrick, handsome young former ship's purser, embrace and kiss each other in an apartment.

Once he saw them quarrel and gesticulate angrily, but they kissed and made up, said the detective, James P. Helpling. Another time, he said, he saw Fitzpatrick, stripped to the waist, walk into the living room and disappear into the rear. On another night, Helpling said, he saw Mrs. Clark in a nightgown and Fitzpatrick in pajamas just before the lights went out with no one else in the house.

Helpling was a witness for Fitzpatrick's wife, Christine, who charges in a $150,000 damage suit that Mrs. Clark stole Fitzpatrick's love.

Mrs. Clark is the widow of the son of the late William A. Clark 2d, who founded the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, and grandson of the late U. S. Senator W. A. Clark, Montana copper magnate.

District Police Enter Inquiry In Bond Racket

Brown Investigates Charge D. C. Officer Arrested Man in Hyattsville.

Washington police officials last night entered the Keystone Automobile Club's probe of the Prince Georges County bonding racket when they began to check the sworn statement of a Washington motorist that he had been arrested for speeding in Maryland by a District officer and locked up in the Hyattsville Jail.

In an affidavit submitted to the Keystone club yesterday, Maynard W. Hollandsworth, 735 North Capitol street, charged he was arrested by an officer from No. 12 Precinct Tuesday morning near Hyattsville, Md.

Taken to the Hyattsville station, Hollandsworth said he was arraigned before a justice of the peace with the instructions that he be kept there.

After setting bond at $200, the justice, he said, committed him to jail. It was not until two days later when the case had been called for trial that he was notified that charges of exceeding 45 miles an hour and reckless driving had been placed against him, Hollandsworth avered.

At the time of his arrest, Hollandsworth said, the Washington policeman was with his wife in a private car and wore an overcoat over his uniform.

Notified yesterday by Walter Newrath, Keystone attorney, of the charges against the Washington policeman, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown ordered Inspector William E. Holmes to begin an immediate investigation of the case.

The Maryland grand jury is expected to be called in special session the first part of December to make a "thorough investigation" of the 100 affidavits assembled by the Keystone Club.

In the meantime State Attorney Alan Bowie has declared he would appoint a special investigator to assist him in working up the evidence for presentation to the jury. He has refused, however, to say definitely when this appointment will be made.

It is expected, however, that someone will be named at the close of this session of the Circuit Court, probably next Tuesday.

Townsend Inquiry Report Due Soon

By the Associated Press.

An expectation that the public soon may get a glimpse of the report of the Congressional committee which investigated the Townsend old-age pension movement was revived yesterday by South Trimble, clerk of the House.

A galley proof sent to Chairman Bell (Democrat), Missouri, for approval, has disappeared, Trimble told reporters. Speaker Bankhead had informed him yesterday he did not have the missing proof and Bell wired that he had long since placed it in the mails.

"I have just sent another proof to Bell by registered mail and asked him to fire it back as soon as possible," Trimble said, adding that as soon as the approved proof is received he will make it public together with the minority report filed several weeks ago by Representative Tolan (Democrat), California.

Meanwhile, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, leader of the revolving old-age pension movement, faces court action on contempt charges arising from his action in walking out on the Bell committee. United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett has said he planned to present the case to a grand jury here soon.

Promoter Slays Ex-Partner, Self

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 6 (AP).—Ed Ballard, 65, French Lick Springs, Ind., sportsman and veteran circus organizer, and Robert Alexander, 65, Detroit, sportsman and promoter, were shot to death tonight in a Hot Springs hotel room.

Chief of Detectives Herbert Akers described the shooting as a "killing and suicide."

He said Alexander shot Ballard then turned the gun upon himself. Ballard died instantly while Alexander succumbed shortly afterward in a hospital.

Police said associates of the two men reported they were former business partners and had quarreled over an old business deal.

They publish a weekly newspaper which has a circulation of 550,000, and they distribute many films of farm information.

Residents Ask Court to Quiet Church Chimes

Citizens of Chevy Chase File Protest Against Being Awakened.

all of the plaintiffs is painful, but to some is intolerable," their petition declares.

The complainants told the court they were persons of "ordinary and average sensibility to sound" and have tried to adjust themselves to the "loud and booming noises" of the chimes, but without avail.

"Most male persons," their petition avers, "called for employment are called at 9 in the forenoon and customarily in the normal course of life do not awake or are not awakened until after 7 o'clock in the morning.

"The noise of the ringing of said chimes is loud, high and annoying, producing a nuisance which has and does now disturb the rest and sleep of the plaintiffs, distracts their minds from any serious employment, interferes with their conversation in the immediate neighborhood of the said Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament and has lessened or destroyed their domestic and social peace and happiness."

The plaintiffs alleged the value of their real estate has depreciated since the chimes were installed a year ago and will continue to depreciate unless an injunction is granted.

To support their contention that 7 a. m. is an unreasonable hour to arise, the plaintiffs affixed to their petition a copy of "J. Gruber's Hagerstown Almanack, established 1797," which shows that during the month of January the sun did not rise until after 7 a. m. and will be just as late in the next two months.

"I can't understand how the chimes would disturb anyone," said Father Smyth. "Why, their music is soft and melodious—it's beautiful."

The chimes were purchased by the parishioners for $11,000 in memory of deceased members of their parish.

Father Smyth said the 22 complainants were incorrect in stating in their suit that the ringing of the "Angelus" in the morning is "not an essential part of worship or services in said church."

The "Angelus," Father Smyth explained, is rung while morning mass is celebrated as a reminder to the faithful of the Mystery of the Incarnation.

Last March a committee of Chevy Chase residents appealed of the corporation counsel's office to invoke a police regulation to stop the ringing of the "Angelus." They were told then their only recourse would be a civil suit.

Jere Crane, superintendent of business affairs for the Board of Education, whose duties require him to be at work at 9 a. m., was one of the original complainants, and his wife's name appeared in the suit yesterday.

"I have nothing to say about the chimes," said Crane.

Others participating in the injunction proceedings are Col. Peter M. Anderson, 5508 Broad Branch road northwest; William H. and Anna Marr Finckel, 3630 Quesada street northwest; Mary D. Hamilton, 5826 Chevy Chase Parkway; Agnes L. Kline, 5724 Chevy Chase Parkway; Newman G. Election Bettor Offers Maxwell Fund Winnings

Victor Will Give $25 if It Is Partly Matched; Hearing Is Delayed.

President Roosevelt's election victory brought stimulus yesterday to The Post's defense fund for Edith Maxwell, whose retrial in a Virginia court has been scheduled for a week from Monday.

With several new contributions for the fund came an offer from E. K. Houser, 1217 Vermont avenue northwest, of his election winnings. Houser, who already has made several contributions to the fund, will add $25 he won on an election bet, if some one will match it.

Houser said he believed interest in the national election had had a retarding effect on the growth of the fund, and now that the election is over every effort should be made to boost the present total. This amount should be substantially increased if Miss Maxwell is to have every opportunity for a successful retrial, Houser added.

Ready to Send Check.

"I will send my check for $25, if any one will match it, or any part of it," he said.

The Post is now awaiting a response to Mr. Houser's offer. The date of the trial, November 16, is not far off, and any help in Miss Maxwell's behalf must be given at once.

Meanwhile the previous total of $355.50 is swelled by nearly $20 in new contributions to a new sum, $375.28.

Contributions which The Post received yesterday were as follows:

Employes Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy	$8.28

Anna Benoit	1.00
Anonymous	1.00

Present total	$375.28

Miss Maxwell is to be given a new trial on charges she killed her father, Trigg Maxwell, with a slipper. The tragedy occurred in the Maxwell home at Wise, Va., late one night a year and a half ago. Angered because his daughter, a 22-year-old school teacher, returned home late, the father engaged in a quarrel with her, and in the attack Edith struck back at him with a slipper. One hour later the father was dead.

Sentenced to 25 Years.

In her first trial a year ago Miss Maxwell was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary by a mountaineer jury which found her guilty of premeditated murder.

Post readers then contributed money to a fight which led, a few weeks ago, to the granting of a new trial.

Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, Va., counsel for Miss Maxwell, is now in Wise, Va., to ask Circuit Judge H. A. W. Skeen for a change of venue.

Hearing Delayed.

Wise, Va., Nov. 6 (AP).—Hearing of a defense plea for a change of venue for the second trial of Edith Maxwell was postponed from today until tomorrow at the request of her attorneys.

Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear, who has said he will oppose the former school teacher's motion for removal from Wise County of her retrial on charge of killing her father, Trigg Maxwell, today said defense counsel was unable to be present today and had requested a one-day delay.

Saying he did not see "any need for a change of venue," Greear declared this week that there was little difference in the attitude of Wise County residents toward Miss Maxwell and those in adjoining counties.

Royal Romance With U. S. Girl In Play of 1920

portrayed as a noble gentleman who wanted only to do the right thing.

"Do you think such a romance could happen?"

"Wasn't Linda splendid, giving him up because she knew a marriage between them would be a betrayal of his country!"

"It was delightful, but I do so wish there could have been a happy ending."

These must have been fairly typical of the comments homebound playgoers on opening night and among speculative matrons dissecting the tragi-comedy over the tea table.

In The Post of May 11, the drama critic rather made himself a party to Thomas' unwitting prophecy by conceding "Just Suppose" to have been held "within the bounds of plausibility."

Its fate will be determined," he concluded, "very largely, of course, by the author's fight to overcome popular prejudice against unhappy endings."

The unhappy ending in question, which fate even now may be casting aside for a happier—or, at least, different—denouement, came with the Prince breaking himself away from Alison Stafford's side to return to his battleship, never to see his beloved again.

The scenes of "Just Suppose" are the Stafford garden and drawing room in Virginia, just outside Washington. To escape a formal function in his honor in the Capital, the Prince of Wales drops incognito into the home of an old Southern family and there meets the young woman who captures his heart.

Dressed in the uniform of a captain in the Royal British Navy, the Prince in the climactic scene offers to "chuck" his imperial responsibilities if Alison will marry him.

"Dear Kit," the girl replies, and who knows but that "Wally" Simpson has replied similarly to a similar proposal, "if I weren't so sure—in my heart—you're going to be a strong man, doing the work that only you can do, carrying burdens that no one else can bear—reflecting honor upon your country and your blood—if I weren't so sure of this, I might say yes——"

"For you to do this thing," she says to his entreaty, "would be the act of a man who had turned his back upon his honor—betrayed his country and sold his people — for a woman. That's what the world would think."

But the Prince is insistent so the girl continues:

"Oh Kit, won't you help me a little? Do you think it is easy for me? That's my heart, going throb, throb, throb. All my life long it will go like that, and with every throb it will say one word to me: Kit—Kit—Kit—until at last it stops, and yet—the man I love is the man I must reverence—the man who can trample himself—yes, and me, too—beneath his feet— for his sacred honor!"

And so Kit, Alison's pet name for her Prince Charming, is convinced of the inevitability of her decision.

They meet in a final embrace and then he leaves for his battleship. The last curtain finds the girl at the garden gate looking after Edward as thunder rolls symbolically and the first rain drops begin to fall.

Five months after its Washington opening, "Just Suppose" was launched upon a Broadway run with Mrs. Whiffen, who at 91 now lies seriously ill in her Virginia home, still in the grandmother's role but with Patricia Collinge as the girl, Geoffrey Kerr as the Prince and Leslie Howard as the latter's companion.

Landon to Map Party's Future With Hamilton

Governor Delays Hunting Trip for Parley; Fish Asks G.O.P. Purge.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 6.—Plans for the future of the Republican Party are in abeyance until after a conference between Gov. Alf M. Landon, defeated Presidential candidate, and John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman, the Governor said today.

"What about the future of the party?" Landon was asked at a press conference.

"I will not discuss any plans for the party until after I have talked with John Hamilton," he answered briefly.

Hamilton is expected here about the middle of next week.

Gov. Landon has postponed a projected duck-hunting trip pending that conference.

Fish Asks Clean-Up.

By the Associated Press.

A new call for a reorganization of the Republican Party came yesterday from Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, who said 'the healthiest thing that could happen" would be "a slight epidemic of resignations" from places high in the party organization.

At the same time, he urged his party to help President Roosevelt put the unemployed to work.

Terming the resignation of Melvin C. Eaton, New York Republican State chairman, "a fine example," Fish asked especially for the resignation of the two national committee members from New York. They are Charles D. Hilles and Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt.

Fish's battle for a reorganization of the party began before the national convention of this year. In the pre-convention campaign, he linked himself with Senator Borah, of Idaho, in an effort to bring about changes in the party leadership and attitude.

"I always believe in facing the facts," he said yesterday. "The Republican Party has been mortally wounded and cannot survive under the present reactionary leadership in New York State, which opposed social security in the Assembly and in the campaign and tried to defeat President Roosevelt by waving a red flag and setting up a Communist bogeyman.

"As a minority party, it is our duty not to be a mere rubber stamp, but to stand squarely for our American system within the compass of the Constitution and for sound, liberal principles of Government.

"The Republican Party should declare a moratorium or breathing spell on partisan propaganda and political hatreds and help President Roosevelt to put 11,000,000 unemployed Americans back to work, as that is the biggest issue with which the country is confronted."

52 Deer Hunters Killed; Peak Total

Salt Lake City, Nov. 6 (AP).—The Nation's deer-hunting fatalities reached an all-time high of 52 tonight, with more than twice that number injured.

A season near its end in the Far West, but with nearly a month to go in the Midwest, left an unpleasant possibility the total may be extended. Between 40 and 50, last year's toll, was the previous high as reported by game wardens in a survey.

Not included in the death list are J. A. Lyman, Wendover, Utah; L. O. M. Lucero, Denver, and Dr. W. S. James, Pueblo, hunters missing in remote areas more than a month.

The total does include, however, two Coloradoans mysteriously shot. Police have not determined formally whether they were victims of stray bullets or were killed deliberately.

An Arizona hunter fell over a 30-foot cliff to death. Two Utahans were killed in a hunting trip automobile accident. Four sportsmen drowned and five died from overexertion. Thirteen shot themselves while handling their guns carelessly and 25 fell under the bullets of other hunters.

Vacations for Winter Are Shifted in Mexico

Mexico City, Nov. 6 (AP).—Without comment, the Mexican government today shifted its employes' winter vacations from December 22-31 to December 1-10.

Informed sources said the government, consistent with its anti-church policies, wished to take all possible emphasis off celebration of Christmas because of its religious connotations.

Spring holidays, which formerly coincided with Holy Week, were changed this year so as to fall at another time.

Meanwhile the Chamber of Deputies, at this afternoon's session, refused to entertain, as "improper," a petition from the Yucatan Socialist Syndicate for a law requiring all priests to marry.

British Act to Protect Nationals From Rebels

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—Spanish rebels have been requested by Great Britain to confine aerial bombings to "purely military objectives," informed quarters disclosed tonight.

The request was communicated—"gently but firmly"—to the insurgent junta's representative at Hendaye, France.

Authoritative sources said the British were concerned over the safety of their nationals in the danger zones of the Spanish civil war.

Two hundred British residents of Madrid were reported housed in the embassy with food supplies sufficient to last two weeks.

Reno Divorcee Denied Decree In Second Action Filed Here

Justice Cox Contends Acceptance of Benefits by Mrs. Alice F. Swain Makes Nevada Separation Binding.

Basing his action on the fact that Mrs. Alice F. Swain, 1414 Juniper street northwest, had obtained a divorce in Reno, Nev., with an accompanying decree for a property settlement and a small monthly alimony payment, Justice Joseph W. Cox, in District Court, yesterday dismissed a suit filed here by Mrs. Swain in which she sought to obtain a District divorce.

Jean M. Boardman, attorney for the former husband, Robert W. Swain, told Justice Cox Mrs. Swain could not now challenge the legality of the Nevada divorce since, after she had been sued there, she filed the appropriate papers and was herself awarded a divorce.

In her suit here, Mrs. Swain asked for a decree on the grounds of desertion and she requested alimony. The former husband moved for dismissal of her bill, and Justice Cox ordered it dismissed.

In so doing, Boardman explained, Justice Cox merely held that one who has obtained benefits under a court order cannot thereafter generally challenge the validity of the decree, especially when the benefits have actually been received. Since Mrs. Swain had received benefits under the Nevada decree, she cannot at this time question its jurisdiction. The ruling does not change the accepted rule here that Nevada divorces are usually invalid if the residence necessary to the suit was established only for the purpose of obtaining a divorce.

Court Voids State NRA in Wisconsin

Milwaukee, Nov. 6 (AP).—A three-judge Federal court handed down decisions today which counsel for the plaintiffs said in effect declared unconstitutional the Wisconsin recovery act and the State codes for the painting and dry-cleaning industries.

The court, consisting of Federal Judge F. A. Geiger, of Milwaukee; Federal Circuit Judge William Sparks and Federal District Judge John P. Barnes, both of Chicago, gave unanimous rulings.

Their opinions granted interlocutory injunctions to Edward A. Weise, Milwaukee painting contractor; the Unity Dye Works, of Milwaukee, and Morris Ward and Anthony Starcedic, operators of a Waukegan (Ill.) cleaning and dye[illegible] firm, against enforcement of the law and the codes.

Fred M. Wylie, member of the Wisconsin trade practice commission, said the United States Supreme Court will be asked to review the decision.

Brann Won't Ask Recount in Maine; To Return to Bar

Augusta, Me., Nov. 6 (AP).—Gov. Louis J. Brann, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for United States Senator in Maine's September 14 election, decided today against a recount of votes. He also decided against carrying "the matter to the United States Senate for Congressional investigation, as many of my friends have urged."

Simultaneously, Gov. Brann signed the official certificate certifying the re-election of Senator Wallace H. White, jr. (Republican), of Auburn, who defeated Brann by 4,848 votes, and extended his "sincere congratulations" to White.

Brann's statement in which he announced his decision was read to the all-Republican executive council. The statement indicated he intended to return to private life and his law practice at the conclusion of his second term as chief executive in January.

5-Power Pact On Sea Safety In War Signed

Protocol Bars Torpedoing Civil Ships Till Crew, Passengers Secure.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 6.—Five major powers tonight were committed not to sink enemy merchant vessels in wartime until passengers and crew are assured safety.

The powers, representatives of which signed the protocol today, were the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan.

The protocol applied specifically to submarines, which would be forbidden to sink merchant ships until crew, passengers and even the vessel's papers were assured safety. Lifeboats would not be considered safe havens, under the protocol, unless land was near and weather fair.

The protocol was designed mainly to prevent any more "sunk without trace" listings of merchant vessels, an occurrence during the World War.

During the World War a submarine commander conforming with international custom could order the crew and passengers of a ship into boats, and then torpedo the vessel without further provision for safety of those adrift.

Berlin, Nov. 6 (AP).—Germany will sign the London protocol for humanization of submarine warfare, a foreign office spokesman said today.

The Reich's acceptance is a logical consequence of the Anglo-German naval agreement, the spokesman added.

Informed persons close to the Wilhelmstrasse also made these statements:

1. Germany, Italy and several South American countries may be expected to recognize an insurgent government in Spain as soon as Madrid falls.

2. Germany does not feel the time is yet ripe for a preliminary Locarno conference, preferring a further period of diplomatic preparation.

Toy-Gun Bandit Gets 2 Years For 25-Cent Holdup in Md.

Washington Taxi Driver Sentenced at Upper Marlboro; Pal Now Serving Term; D. C. Prisoner Given 7 Years for Robbing Aged Couple.

Mark H. Dulin, 34, cab driver, who lives at 710 K street northeast, was sentenced at Upper Marlboro yesterday to serve two years in the penitentiary for his part in a 25-cent gas station holdup at Meadows, Md., August 14.

Sentence was imposed by Judge William M. Loker of the Circuit Court.

Dulin was found guilty last Wednesday of attempting to hold up Francis White, attendant at a gas staion and general store.

According to the testimony, Dulin was with James Perkins, another Washington cab driver, who is now serving a sentence of three years at Lorton Reformatory, when Perkins threatened White with a toy pistol covered with a handkerchief and robbed him of 25 cents.

A report was broadcast by the Prince Georges County police and the two men were arrested a half hour later by Officer R. J. Walters, of No. 11 Precinct.

William Foster, 38, of 13 K street northeast, a paroled convict, was sentenced to seven years in penitentiary for the theft of $1,800 from Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Gill, of Boulevard Heights, Md., last April 2.

A circuit court jury convicted Foster several days ago of robbing the aged couple of their life-time savings from an old trunk after he had bound and gagged them.

A tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington under the personal direction of Director J. Edgar Hoover featured yesterday's sessions of the convention of the Women's Intercollegiate Student Government Association at the University of Maryland.

The delegates who arrived at College Park last Thursday for a three-day program spent three hours yesterday in business sessions and then left for a sightseeing trip in Washington.

Richard R. Brown, deputy executive director, National Youth Administration, was the speaker at a banquet last night. Other speakers were Mrs. Ernestine R. Grigsby, director of the Division of Community Organization, and Miss Lavinia Engle, a member of the Federal Social Security Board.

A charge of manslaughter against Clarence E. Vadala, 20-year-old University of Maryland student, was dismissed by a circuit court jury yesterday investigating the automobile accident in Mount Rainier several months ago in which Charles E. Renneberger, Washington railway mail clerk, was killed.

Vadala, driver of the car which struck Renneberger, had been exonerated by a coroner's jury and later indicted by the grand jury on the manslaughter charge.

Parking Opponent Asks Police Action In 'Pie-Throwing'

Seeking an "explanation" of the recent "pie-throwing outrage" at his Georgetown home, Teunis F. Collier, building contractor, yesterday in a letter to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, demanded apprehension of the suspected vandals.

In a published statement soon after the incident, Maj. Brown, according to the letter, blamed the pastry-hurling on youthful Hallowe'en pranksters. But Collier accused neighbors who were resentful of his efforts to seek enforcement of community parking regulations.

"The outrageous occurrences in and about my home are not the mischievous pranks of children, but were instigated by neighbors whose boldness has been encouraged by the action of some of your officers and their conduct displayed toward me," Collier wrote Maj. Brown.

Early on the morning of October 26, Collier awoke to find the front of his home smeared with soft pies—custard, cherry and pumpkin. He admitted calling Seventh Precinct police on numerous occasions to report minor parking violations in the neighborhood and blamed irate neighbors for the "outrage."

Suspect Kills Self After Woman Dies

Miami, Fla., Nov. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Beulah Porter was found dead in her automobile today with her throat cut and police said a man they sought as a suspect committed suicide a few minutes before they reached his house.

The man was Dewitt Fitzgerald, who until a year ago was a clerk at the hotel where Mrs. Porter had lived for the last three years with her husband, J. W. Porter, a salesman, and their daughter, Anne, 7. Hotel officials said Porter was en route to Jacksonville today on business.

Fitzgerald also was married. Police said they found Fitzgerald's revolver, which they said he used, in a washbowl full of water.

The knife with which Mrs. Porter's throat was slashed was not found. Authorities said Fitzgerald had gashes on his own throat as if he had tried to cut himself. He had been shot in the head.

New Pact May Cut Gold Movements

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that the monetary accord of the United States, Great Britain and France may be expected to bring about "a reduction in the volume of international gold movements."

In its survey of current business, the department added that "political and financial uncertainties in the gold-bloc countries" have been major factors influencing heavy movements of the metal from Europe to the United States during the last two years.

In another report, however, the department said gold imports for the week ended October 30 totaled $18,678,337, or about $13,500,000 more than the figure for the previous week.

Of the aggregate imports, $12,170,974 came from Great Britain, and $3,730,456 from Canada.

Gold exports during the week ended October 30 were set at $42,891, compared with $27,699 in the previous week.

Easton, Md., Nov. 6 (AP).—A Washington man, Edward Carlton Moran, about 40, was found dead in his room in a hotel here today. His body was found and identified by F. E. Randall, also of Washington, his private secretary.

Farm Leaders To Give Views On Crop Plan

Opinions on U. S. Insurance Sought by President's Committee.

By the Associated Press.

A special Presidential committee today will receive the opinions of farm leaders on the Administration's proposal to insure crops against drought, floods, disease, insect pests and other hazards of nature.

More than 50 farm organization spokesmen have accepted the committee's invitation to discuss "all-risk" crop insurance.

Secretary Wallace, chairman of the committee, yesterday reported representatives of the warehouse industry had offered their co-operation by proposing reduced rates for wheat, cotton, corn and other crops stored on an annual basis.

Previously, representatives of stock and mutual insurance companies interested in farm insurance had offered advice and co-operation.

President Roosevelt in announcing his committee in September said, "Final recommendations for legislation should be formulated with the advice and assistance of national farm organization leaders so that the plans can be submitted to Congress with the approval and support of the representatives of the farmers."

Secretary Wallace told reporters this week, "It may be possible that farmers will not want it," referring to the Federal crop insurance.

Spokesmen for the committee said presidents of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the Farmers Union, and the National Cooperative Council had been invited to bring five representatives with them to the conference.

Invitations have been sent to numerous individual farm organizations as well as State farmer AAA committee leaders.

Dealer Bets Store To $2 on President, Misses Seeing Him

The most disappointed man in Washington yesterday was Najceb Neam who bet his $8,000 delicatessen business against $2 to support his belief President Roosevelt would be re-elected.

Neam was disappointed because the business which he retained when he won the $2 prevented him from welcoming President Roosevelt back in town.

The 46-year-old Syrian, who made his 4,000-to-1 bet with Firest V. Green, newspaper distributor, said he didn't tell his wife until after the election because he did not want her to lose sleep. He wasn't worried, himself, Neam explained.

"Lose sleep?" he asked. "Not me. I've got nerve."

Neam said he made the bet in good faith and would have surrendered his shop if he had lost.

"If it wasn't for Roosevelt, nobody would have any real estate, anyway," he said. "I'm not a political man but I love that man."

Three Seized on Coast In Race Lottery Scheme

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 6 (AP).—Government agents today announced the arrest of three men in what they said was a $3,000,000 lottery scheme based on the Santa Anita Christmas Day Handicap.

Customs agents brought three Los Angeles men before United States Commissioner Paul Lockhart and charged them with conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States under the tariff acts and possession of $17,300 worth of lottery tickets.

Commissioner Lockhart set bond of $3,500 for Frank Thayer, $500 for Walt Olsen and $2,500 for Ed Hayes.

Customs officers said 3,000,000 tickets to be sold for $1 each were printed in Mexico City on order of a Los Angeles corporation.

Mexicans Get Permit For Flight Over U. S.

Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Nov. 6 (AP).—The War Department has granted permission for the flight of 10 Mexican airplanes over U. S. territory, from Cleveland, to Laredo, Tex., it was announced at Eighth Corps Area headquarters today.

A date for the departure of the flight from Fort Erie, Ontario, was not set. The flight's itinerary over the United States will be Cleveland, Columbus, Richmond, Ind., Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Ind.; St. Louis, then southwest to Laredo, Tex.

U. S.-Made Inkwells To Be Used in Senate

By the Associated Press.

By proclaiming a personal embargo on Czechoslovakian inkwells, Leslie Biffle, Senate majority secretary, yesterday saved approximately $432 for the Government.

"For years the Senate has been buying glass inkwells from Czechoslovakia at $5 a copy," Biffle said with some heat, "and it just didn't seem right to pay that much money to strangers."

When Congress convenes January 5, he added, each of the Senate chamber's 96 desks will be equipped with an American-made inkwell, priced at 50 cents.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet (William Knoll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicholas Moldavan, and Victor Gottlieb) in the Central Public Library Friday night. Program: Quartet in D, K499 (Mozart), Quartet in B flat, Op. 67 (Brahms), Quartet in G, Op. 18, No. 2 (Beethoven).

On its second appearance before a Washington audience, just a week after its debut on Capitol Hill, the Coolidge Quartet confirmed one's first impressions of its artistic stability. Thus, early in its career the integrity of the ensemble is well established, and the playing has a decisive unanimity that speaks well for its future. There is still some polishing to be done on the tone quality in fortissimo passages where roughness contrasts with the general suavity of performance.

In the program there was straying from familiar grounds. Probably more people are acquainted with Mozart's D major quartet than with any other of his string foursomes. Its frequent appearance and its popularity may have an explanation in the aura of the music, for there is more than a suspicion that Mozart was making a deliberate bid for favor. He had been disappointed in the rapid lapse of interest in "Le Nozze di Figaro," and wished to retrieve himself with something palpably attractive.

While there is no sacrifice of stylistic dignity, the D major quartet shows a striking decline from the C major which precedes it. The ideas are not on the same level of significance, and there is less depth of emotion. One distinctly feels in the nimble animation and sparkling amiability of the music an effort to please an imagined popular taste.

The artistic kinship between Brahms and Browning, observable on several planes of their work, is particularly exemplified in the B flat quartet of the bluff and tender Johannes. Its four movements are as many dramatic monologues in which emotions are couched in intellectual terms. Their poesy is always tempered with analysis and their energy directed in the subtle ways of allusion.

Beethoven's G major quartet from Opus 18 springs from one of his happiest moods. "The Compliment," as it was nicknamed by some contemporary wit who saw an exchange of ceremonious greetings in its opening phrases, abounds in flowery conceits and ingenious devices. One of the latter is the expansion of the ornamental gruppetti of the first movement into the charming fioritura passages which adorn the first violin and violoncello parts in the adagio.

D. C. Ad Club Pays Garfinckel Tribute

Tribute was paid to the memory of Julius Garfinkel by members of the Advertising Club of Washington last night as they held the second of their series of public lectures at the Willard Hotel.

Mr. Garfinckel, who died Thursday night, was eulogized as one of the city's most active forces and leading merchants by James W. Hardey, chairman of the club's lecture committee.

The speaker was Ralph L. Goldsmith, general manager of Lansburgh and Bros., who took as his topic "Merchandising Advertising." About 150 men and women from schools and the business world attended.

The next lecture will be given November 20 at the Willard, with Henry J. Kaufman, president of the Kaufman Agency, speaking on "Planning Advertising."

Nazi Who Laughs Ill-Advisedly Gets Slapped—in Jail

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 6.—Unhappy is the humorist who makes the wrong people laugh in the Third Reich.

Editors of two German magazines made the wrong people laugh, so their magazines were suppressed "till further notice."

One of the periodicals printed an article on Frederick the Great which the propaganda ministry alleged held the great statesman up to ridicule. The other, the well-known monthly Querschnitt, printed a "dictionary of foreign words" in which the following definitions occur:

Absurd—When one hopes for a better future.

Journalism—Tight-rope dance between the lines.

Ideals—Toys for big children.

The definition of ideals sounded a particularly sour note in quarters close to Dr. Goebbels, for the keynote of Nazi propaganda is emphasis on ideals; ideals of patriotic sacrifice, ideals of communist solidarity, racial purity, military bravery, loyalty to the leader.

Five Are Captured In Prison Break

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 6 (AP).—Five of ten convicts who seized the power plant of the State Penitentiary, switched off lights and escaped under cover of darkness, were captured today less than 18 hours after their bloodless coup.

A nearby swamp yielded two of the prisoners when bloodhounds picked up their trail. Two were taken while walking along a residential street, and the fifth was picked up in the railroad yards. All surrendered without resistance.

Hamp Draper, chief of the convict department, named two of the captured men, Russell Copeland and Robert Weems, serving time from Jefferson County for larceny and robbery, as ringleaders of the break.

Copeland and Paul Wheeler, confederates in the break, were taken into custody when they became hungry and sent a small boy to a grocery store for food.

The other two captured were Richard Dunn and Harold Koerner.

Chicago Tribune Suit On Taxes Is Dismissed

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—Circuit Judge John R. Caverly today dismissed a mandamus suit brought by Harrison Parker, former newspaper executive, to compel a $57,000,000 assessment in capital stock taxes on the Chicago Tribune. The judge denied Parker leave to file an amended bill. Meanwhile across the hall former State's Attorney John A. Swanson took the stand in Parker's $1,500,000 libel action against Swanson and the Tribune.

Artistically Perfect.

The most striking incident connected with President Roosevelt's triumphal return to Washington occurred not at Union Station, nor during his passage through the cheering crowds which lined the route to the White House. These acknowledgments were his due and in the last analysis provided only a pleasant footnote to the national testimonial of affection and esteem which was accorded in no uncertain manner on Tuesday.

After his arrival at the White House, however, when the President was holding a press conference as part of his normal routine, came an episode of a different but fundamentally far more significant character. It represented a tribute paid by the President to his critics rather than a tribute paid to the President by his admirers. And both types of tribute are important in a country which intends to hold true to democratic principles.

Mr. Roosevelt revealed, and there was no impelling reason why he should have done so, that on the eve of the election he accorded himself only 360 electoral votes as against 171 for Mr. Landon. This striking underestimate of the actual results he smilingly explained as due to his "well-known conservative tendencies." And perhaps there is more truth than poetry in that remark.

Only the President can say just what specific considerations prompted him last Sunday so to minimize the strength of his popular following. But the fact that he did so is a most happy augury. It shows a realization in Mr. Roosevelt's mind that some of his policies might well have, even if they did not, aroused overwhelming general resentment in many sections of the country. It shows a consciousness of mistakes made, and therefore implies a willingness to make rectifications where desirable. It shows an expectation of opposition, and consequently may be taken to indicate a willingness to heed intelligent criticism even though there may now be no political need for giving that consideration.

It is impossible to imagine a Hitler, a Mussolini, or a Stalin publicly announcing that they had expected far more antagonism from a Nation-wide plebiscite than was actually accorded them. In a tactful way, at the highest peak of popularity he has so far attained, Mr. Roosevelt has disposed of all the silly nonsense which shrieked hysterically that his re-election would menace American institutions. And instead of using the traditional coals of fire the President has figuratively heaped flowers on the heads of his enemies. It is a method which will stagger even Father Coughlin, if he has ever read the New Testament.

A Medieval Code.

So far as one can judge from a brief summary of its provisions, the new Nazi criminal code reveals that profound contempt for the rights of the individual that is characteristic of the totalitarian state. Protection of the nation is, as the code states, more important than protection of the individual. There is a vast difference, however, between the application of that doctrine to the citizens of a free state and to the politically disfranchised subjects of Germany. In the United States, we proceed upon the theory that the Nation is best served by respecting and protecting individual rights to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

In a country where all human relationships are regulated from above in accordance with arbitrary rules imposed by a supreme authority, the rights of the individual are subordinated to those of the state in a way that seems intolerable to Americans. The difference in viewpoint is strikingly exemplified by the instructions to German judges to pass sentence not only in accordance with the statute books but "the healthy sense of justice of the German people." It is further illustrated by the legalization of dueling as a means of settling questions of honor.

Such reliance upon the arbitrary judgment of authority as a substitute for written laws, and upon combat as an alternative to legal action, is shocking to free men who live under a government of laws devised to safeguard individual rights. It is, however, a logical outcome of the theory of the state which enables the National Socialist government to rationalize and defend its assaults upon the liberty of the individual in every sphere of activity it chooses to invade.

Results Of A Canard.

Republican efforts to gain labor votes by vicious misrepresentation of the social security pay-roll taxes were a complete boomerang. Probably no simple blunder contributed more in alienating fair-minded voters who might otherwise have favored Mr. Landon.

Unfortunately the damage done by false and misleading statements of this character cannot be ignored as easily as the passionate stupidity of those who sponsored it. Critics of the old-age pension system established under the act have, either intentionally or unwittingly, struck at one of its most constructive features—the plan for exacting contributions from employes as well as employers.

Opponents of this joint contributory system asserted that the pay-roll levies upon workers were equivalent to wage cuts. This falsehood has been rather lamely met by emphasizing the fact that two-thirds of the pay-roll taxes will ultimately be collected from employers. The result of this ill-judged political debate has been to create an impression that workers ought to be relieved from any obligation to pay for old-age annuities and unemployment insurance benefits by contributing to insurance funds. Indeed Mr. Roosevelt is to be congratulated for his moderation in not telling the Republicans that if they wanted employers to foot the whole bill he would assist that end.

It is significant, for instance, that a large manufacturing concern has just announced its intention to pay the workers' as well as the employer's share of the pay-roll taxes due next January. The company undoubtedly sincerely believes that it is setting a good example for others to follow. And its action will probably be widely cited by leaders of the A. F. of L. who are preparing to urge revision of the law with a view to imposing pay-roll taxes upon employers only.

No matter who pays these taxes into the Treasury of the United States it is a foregone conclusion that the workers of the country will in the long run have to carry the main burden of the pay-roll levies, directly or indirectly. President Green himself has admitted that the worker as consumer pays the employer's share, in addition to his direct contribution, in the form of higher prices. How, then, does Mr. Green propose to improve the worker's position by collecting the entire tax from the employer?

We should frankly face the fact that the cost of any comprehensive system of social insurance, covering a large proportion of the working population, must and should be at least partly paid by the insured themselves. The matter of chief concern is to determine whether the levies are too high for the workers to meet. Nothing is gained in evading this plain issue by trying to devise plans for shifting the initial costs to industry.

Of course it may be argued that if workers have to pay for social insurance indirectly, it does not greatly matter whether they or their employers are directly assessed. But such a conclusion ignores a number of very vital reasons for clinging to the principle of employe contributions. When the employe contributes he feels that his annuity is earned and is his of right. It is not a mere gratuity bestowed by a paternal employer upon a needy subordinate. There was something really ludicrous in the Republican apostles of "rugged individualism" rising to argue that less individual interest in social security is desirable.

When the employe helps to pay the immediate cost of his insurance protection, he is as much concerned as the employer to see that the system is administered economically and kept within reasonable limits in respect to the scale of benefits. A sharing of the cost also relieves the pressure to shift taxes to the public without delay. Indeed there is a much better chance that a good proportion of these taxes will be absorbed by prosperous industries in preference to raising prices.

Both from the financial and the social viewpoints, for the sake of employes as well as employers, the contributory system is greatly to be preferred to plans which would limit assessments to employers alone, or would call for general taxes imposed upon the insured and the uninsured alike.

What the Republican propagandists sought was, in reality, universal doles in preference to bona fide insurance payments based on sound actuarial principles.

Modern Hessians.

The ruthless bitterness of the present civil war in Spain has been intensified by the presence in the rebel army of Moorish troops and foreign legionaries. The issue of the direful conflict concerns neither. The Moslem auxiliaries from Africa are of a people that for 700 years were the traditional enemy of Christian Spaniards. Yet, in the fratricidal struggle their help has been invoked by Spaniard against Spaniard. Also, the legionaries in the Fascist forces are of the same stamp of international adventurers who make up the more famous French Foreign Legion.

Professional soldiers without a country, fighting for a wage of so many pesetas a month, the so-called "Bridegrooms of Death" of Col. Franco's army are nothing more than a modern version of the mercenaries who once sold their services to any prince with a war on his hands. They are essentially of the same breed as the "free companies" of the condottieri, who fought in the pay of the Italian city-states or of the Hessians in the American Revolution.

As such, they are no more interested in what political philosophy prevails in Spain than were Sir John Hawkwood or Francesco Bussone da Carmagnola in the real issues which divided medieval Italy into warring camps. It is a major tragedy that Spaniards of today are not permitted to settle the questions of their future government without the partisan intervention of other powers, or the participation of mercenary or colonial elements in a strife that is not theirs.

Milk For The Undernourished.

Effects of the recent advance in the price of milk are not yet fully apparent, but the hardship it will impose upon the poor is obvious. Unfortunately, that aspect of the problem did not enter into the decisions which resulted in 14-cent milk for Washington. Yet from the community viewpoint an adequate supply of milk in homes where it is most needed is of far-reaching importance, entirely aside from humanitarian reasons.

Although the higher price is a direct result of producers' demands upon milk distributors, the advance in wholesale prices had been sanctioned by the AAA. That procedure raises some grave questions aside from the constitutional issue on which it was set aside by a District court. If a governmental agency is to fix minimum prices in favor of producers, it is utterly unreasonable to leave the distribution of milk to consumers unregulated. Both the producers and the distributors are well organized. Where there is any public intervention, unorganized consumers would seem to have the first claim to protection.

Reaction against the higher prices may force a return to the 13-cent level, as it did in New York. But such resistance from consumers would simply mean a greater scarcity of milk in the homes of the poor. Regardless of what may be the outcome of the dispute over prices, District authorities might well consider some means of supplying milk to those who cannot afford to pay either 13 or 14 cents per quart.

Two plans of this sort have been worked out in New York. Needy families, especially those with undernourished children, are given free milk purchased with a special relief fund. But a much larger number—35,000 families—are granted the privilege of buying milk for 8 cents per quart at 150 stations which remain open for only two hours each morning. In this way distribution costs are reduced to a minimum. Yet the dairies are glad to supply this milk for the return they receive is more than could be obtained from the disposal of surpluses through other channels.

This plan of making concessions to families unable to pay regular retail prices seems to have constructive possibilities. It will be the subject of a special study by D. E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel for the Department of Agriculture, within the next few weeks. Local authorities may profitably follow that survey with the object of considering a similar plan for the District.

Repercussions On The Danube.

When Premier Mussolini said last Sunday that there cannot be stability in the Danubian Basin "until justice shall be rendered to Hungary" it was foreordained that his remarks would meet with a deliriously enthusiastic reception at Budapest. Magyar hopes of regaining the lands lost by Hungary after the war have flamed into new life. Nor can it be denied that the recent agreement of the German and Italian dictators regarding their "parallel interests" may help bring nearer the day of treaty revision in Central Europe.

It is this very circumstance that explains why the remarks of Mussolini have caused tremors of varying intensities to run up and down the spines of Little Entente statesmen. The encirclement of Hungary, so as to prevent it from securing any of its lost territories, is the Alpha and Omega of the Little Entente's program. Anything which tends to upset the status quo in the Danubian area is, therefore, regarded as anathema in Prague, Bucharest and Belgrade.

As the most likely potential victim of a German-Italian-Hungarian deal regarding Central Europe, Czechoslovakia is particularly alarmed by the implications of Mussolini's latest speech. The press in Prague insists that it has accentuated the European crisis and created new formidable obstacles to peace.

But public opinion in Rumania, and to a lesser extent Yugoslavia, has also been aroused by Mussolini's warm references to Hungary's territorial aspirations. Fearing the ultimate effect of treaty revision in favor of Hungary, even if not immediately at their expense, the Yugoslavs are inclined to look the Duce's gift horse—a general Italo-Yugoslav settlement—in the mouth.

In Rumania all sections of the press and the public were shocked by the Italian dictator's remarks. There it has had the interesting effect of turning the Rumanian Fascists, who recently have come very much to the fore, against their idol, Mussolini. Seemingly the one effective way of unifying disunited Rumania is the suggestion of Hungarian expansion. The Rumanians fully realize that this, once started, would not stop short at their borders.

It is probable, therefore, that Mussolini's speech will serve to give new life to the Little Entente, thus rendering more rather than less difficult any negotiated revision of the present territorial settlement in the Danubian area.

"Gone With The Wind."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read the recent communications in your paper, concerning the book "Gone With the Wind," I wish to add my bit to its popularity. Its truths regarding the conditions of the South are not enlarged and no "Yankee" need take exceptions to it. For the dear old South and its "darkies" suffered untold miseries for their homes and loved ones.

I came into the world a few years after the horrible conflict and my first impression of its terrors were impressed upon me when my dear old grandfather, who was too old to fight, was taken as a prisoner from his wife and eight children. After being released from prison and walking 125 miles home he found his farm and stock devastated, his help scattered and his money worthless. But did he give up? No. With his wife, who had never cooked a meal in her life, and the help of a few servants, who would not take their "freedom," they all pulled together and fought the battles of poverty and democracy..

The book tells the truth about the Civil War, which should go to show the children of the coming generation what a damnable plague war is. With the beginning of a new Administration, and our intelligent people of both the North and the South, why should we ever have another war on our American soil?

MINNIE HAMMANT.
Warrenton, Va., Nov. 3.

Disappointed Citizen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a disappointed American citizen, I want to voice an opinion. The events of the last three years have convinced me that Franklin D. Roosevelt is President only to the people who voted for him. He said a few days ago that there would be no forgotten men and forgotten races. Did he include Republicans in that statement?

Does he intend to prove his words by granting the right of franchise to the colored people in the South, who are more entitled to vote, even if they can't repeat the Constitution of the United States than the foreign born who can't speak a word of English and who don't know there is a Constitution?

Further, should qualified persons seeking honest employment be required to state their politics and be told that their services, regardless of their ability, are not required unless they can prove that they are New Deal Democrats?

From a Republican, not defeated, just disgusted.

MAN WITHOUT A PRESIDENT.
Bethesda, Md., Nov. 5.

Proven Prophet.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On November 4, 1928, when Herbert Hoover defeated Al Smith in the Presidential election of that year and elected Franklin Roosevelt Governor of New York, the writer in the rooms of the Democratic National Committee in the National Press Building in this city predicted that Franklin Roosevelt would be the next nominee of the Democratic Party for President of the United States and that he would be overwhelmingly elected.

The following day he publicly nominated him in the newspapers and kept it up until he was nominated in Chicago in 1932 when he sent me this note, dated August 6, 1932: "As a long-distance prophet you certainly have proved your skill and now it remains to be seen whether your forecast in next November comes true. I, too, hope that we can get together in the next few weeks and discuss plans for the campaign."

That came true. He was elected. Nearly four years have elapsed since he was elected President. On April 15, 1936, three months before his renomination at Philadelphia, the writer in a letter to him said: "You will be re-elected despite the opposition of the money interests." He was.

Now he predicts that his next four years as President will be the most liberal in the history of the country in influencing legislation in the interest of the whole people, irrespective of political parties, whether one calls it democracy or socialism, resulting in the greatest prosperity in history, and that he will go down in history as the greatest President since Lincoln for the reasons stated above.

WILLIAM J. DWYER.
Washington, Nov. 5.

From An Ex-Republican.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe you might be interested in the reason why I, an old Republican who definitely meant last June to vote Republican, changed my mind this fall and voted Democratic.

I was strongly sick of the ballyhoo of the New Deal, of the unnecessary extravagance of its spending, of its political graft. I believe the Republicans had learned their lesson. I thought they would consolidate the gains in social security made by the Democrats and move forward at a slower, more orderly and more considered pace. Instead, I and the millions who felt as I did found that the Republicans were challenging all social security acts as "communism," calling the President a "Communist," stating that his objectives of social legislation would "change the American form of Government," calling the Supreme Court's self-established power to cancel well-considered acts of elected Legislatures by a mere majority rule "sacred."

There was not one word spoken by the Democrats in this recent campaign which had any influence upon my vote. Those who persuaded me to vote for President Roosevelt were Col. Knox, Mark Sullivan, Franklyn Waltman, and the articles in the Saturday Evening Post. These convinced me that the Republicans dreamed only of "the good old days" when an employer had the power of starving those who were not satisfied with near-starvation, when a banker could speculate pretty nearly without check with his depositors' funds. I became afraid that, if elected, they would turn their back squarely on all progress, on all decent social legislation, on all bank and investment safeguards for the people and precipitate upon Americans something much worse eventually than the present "New Deal."

WISHFULLY WAITING.
Washington, Nov. 5.

Political Strategy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many of our country's valuable and intellectually honest newspapers have published numerous constructive and instructive editorials relative to the present trend of administration.

They stand forth in bold contrast to "editorials" in many newspapers whose editors ought to hang their heads in shame and whose insidious propaganda against the best interest of our country, the future impartial historian and the wrath of our people will everlastingly condemn.

Our great worthy statesmen have been overwhelmed and stunned by the flagrant indulgence of ethical and moral delinquence perpetrated under the guise of political strategy.

The Republican Party and unfaithful Democrats should be deeply remorseful and ashamed of such technique.

M. PATTON SUTTON.
Bronxville, N. Y., Nov. 4.

Congratulates President.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my capacity as director of the Inter-American Trademark Bureau of Havana, Cuba, which is an international and official organization of the American republics interested in the development of inter-American trade, I desire through you to extend my congratulations to the people of the United States for their wisdom in maintaining the only policy which can save present civilization from its absolute destruction. This was accomplished through the re-election of that great humanist, President Roosevelt, who has established a precedent in history by maintaining not only the deep attention of the American people in his two elections, but that of the entire world.

DR. JUAN LUIS RODRIGUEZ.
Washington, Nov. 4.

Radio Applause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although I spend the better part of my spare time studiously avoiding listening to the radio, I cannot, in the very nature of things, avoid hearing some portion of the material that is incessantly being fired at us over the air waves. From this I gather that the participants in so-called comedy broadcasts, and perhaps the studio audiences, enjoy themselves immensely since they're laughing all the time and apparently having a great deal of fun. The trouble is, they frequently neglect to share this with the great unseen audiences which are, incidentally, always estimated to be in the millions.

Announcers are notoriously liberal in estimating the approximate size of the unseen audience, and if there is any one of them who failed to use the phrase "the millions listening in" in talking of the size of the audience it must have been sometime when I wasn't tuned in.

Most assuredly there is a grave flaw in broadcasting technique which aims at a visible audience response rather than at an invisible audience response. The noise and laughter of the studio audience are confusing to the listener in his home and serve only to annoy and confuse him.

It is my opinion that artificially stimulated applause and response do not fool the home listener. He appreciates that much of this stuff is synthetic. Radio presentation in its development must take into consideration this basic principle. Motion-picture studios manufacture films without the aid of studio audiences. I do not understand why radio studios do not follow the same sound practice, since the broadcast is essentially for the unseen listener.

Commonwealth College.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those who are not aware of the existence of Commonwealth College in Mena, Ark., should know that it has a proud heritage in the defense of human liberty. Courageously for many years, since it was established under the able leadership of Dr. William Zeuch, a political economist, the college has successfully attracted a faculty of very able men and women.

On the advisory committee of Commonwealth, one notes the names of Roger Baldwin, E. C. Lindeman, Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, Dr. George S. Counts, Scott Nearing, Oscar Ameringer, Carl Haessler and others.

In a letter, which reached me the other day, Charlotte Moskowitz, secretary-treasurer, appeals for cooperation against the rising tide of reaction and fascism, in the hope that friends of the college will give it support during a very difficult time. Her letter in part reads as follows:

"Faced with growing reaction in the South, with further impoverishment of sharecroppers and tenant farmers, and intensified attacks upon workers generally, Commonwealth College is making energetic effort to meet this condition.

"We want to provide scholarships; to advertise the school; to reach trade unions and farm organizations. It is essential, if we are to do this, that we receive immediate financial aid."

Commonwealth is building good men! LABOR PROGRESSIVE.

Boston Art Exhibit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The loan exhibition of art treasures from Japan has just closed with a record attendance. Through the exhibition many people have come to know a side of Japanese mentality that has been little understood heretofore. The collection called forth genuine enthusiasm and brought enjoyment to many.

The large attendance, however, would not have been possible without the intelligent and sympathetic publicity given by the press to this event. For your generous interest and co-operation we are most grateful.

Old F Street.

THE death of Julius Garfinckel, whose name has for so many years been associated by Washingtonians with discriminating shopping, recalls a flood of memories concerning F street a generation ago. Those were days when Mr. Garfinckel presided over the developing destinies of a store very different in external appearance from the present handsome structure at Fourteenth and F.

Going downtown on the Eleventh street carline I would watch expectantly for the M street stop, hoping that some of the young ladies from Mount Vernon Seminary would get on. That school occupied two buildings on the western corner of Eleventh and M streets. It was better known as Miss Summer's School in those days. A chaperoned group of girls often boarded the car on a Saturday morning, and as I was very fond of boarding-school stories I had great fun imagining these girls as heroines of fascinating escapades.

At the corner of Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue I would always look for a famous wistaria which covered a frame house with double porches. It disappeared only a few years ago and must have been equal in age and beauty to the one which still flourishes at the Cosmos Club.

After that stop we were soon on F street. The smaller shops have changed a good deal since those days, with a few exceptions, such as Rich's and Reeves'. Looking at the big department store which covers the entire block save that small red-brick corner of Rich's shoe store, one feels this remaining landmark will be gone before many more years.

How well I remember one particular visit to Rich's—that third floor for children's shoes and the view of the church from the window. The time that sticks in my memory I was fitted with a pair of high-light tan-buttoned shoes, and my ambition was satisfied beyond words! The other day I took my daughter there. In spite of a few modern streamlined furnishings the room was much the same, and the view of the church exactly as it had been. My daughter was fitted to flat sports oxfords. She seemed satisfied, but I do not think she was as thrilled as I was over those high-buttoned boots.

Huyler's, at the corner of Twelfth and F streets, was sometimes visited during a shopping tour with my mother. But more often we went on for lunch at Reeves, where I could spin around on the stools before the counter while deciding between the delicious pies and sandwiches spread so temptingly before us. When I had advanced to the age of going downtown alone, or with girl friends, Huyler's or Brownley's up on G street, were favorite resorts.

After those romantic plays at the Columbia Theater, given by the Columbia Players, we needed a rich chocolate soda or banana split to bring us back to earth while we gossiped and sighed over our favorite actors, A. H. Van Buren and Everett Butterfield, Ruth Chatterton, Charlotte Walker, Julia Dean and others. Some have become nationally known, but many who never achieved Hollywood or Broadway fame were competent actors. They were very much liked and appreciated by Washingtonians in those long, hot summers before air-cooled movies were even imagined.

Brentano's, if I remember rightly, was on the southwest corner of Twelfth and F streets, and farther up the block was a smaller Jelleff's. At the next corner, Thirteenth street, stood Garfinckels of the red-brick era. The old store had the same air of distinction as its modern successor, and I always felt a little hushed inside it.

Going on up the next block, I remember Reid Baker's popular kodak and gift shop, and just beyond the alley there was the Hooe-Iron Building where for many years the U. S. Geological Survey had its offices. One entered them over a slightly raised platform.

Just inside the entrance were some bicycle racks. My father, who was with the Survey for many years, always rode his bicycle to and from work in those pre-automobile days. It was the customary way to travel. Most of the bicycles were parked in the back alley and those in the front must have been for messengers or perhaps belonged to high officials. How simple the parking problem when Government employes could place their vehicles of transportation in the building where they labored!

Adjoining that building, and occupying the corner where now stands the National Press Building, was the old Ebbitt House. I vividly remember the large figured carpet and lace curtains in the lobby and the general business atmosphere that prevailed there. Downstairs, with an entrance downhill on the Fourteenth street side, was the more fashionable restaurant. It represented to me the height of sophistication.

But my first visit there must have been some years after the trips I have been recalling, when button boots and Reeves' lemon pies were climaxes in themselves, when fathers rode bicycles to work and summer stock companies flourished. By the time I was first taken to lunch at the old Ebbitt House there was already a war in Europe, Washington was beginning to take its place as an important world capital, and the modern era had begun.

Fair Enough

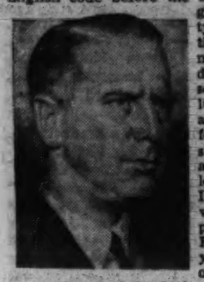
"Flash!"

I HAVE BEEN dipping my bill into a book about the Supreme Court of the United States, the "Scotus," as the brass operators used to call it in their pidgin-English code before the day of the telegraph coffee grinder known as the teletype. When I was a cub in the press association business in Chicago on certain days in the Supreme Court season there would come a lull in the day's occupation and Ed Conkle would sit forward on his chair in the slot of the telegraph desk and all of us would fall silent waiting for Claude Irons or Roscoe Johnson or whoever it was that happened to be catching on the East wire into Chicago to yell, "Flash!" and then sing out the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on some important matter.



The telegraph operator—Irons or Johnson or whoever it was—would then hurriedly type out on his old-fashioned muzzle-loading invisible Remington the text of the flash and a summary of the decision and flip the copy across to Mr. Conkle, who would rip off the flimsy sheets and pass them around to the brass operators on the North, South and West wires.

A young fellow named Arthur Park and another cub named Karl Bickel, who later became president of the United Press, would then go into frenzies, beating the living go-gollies out of their typewriters, reducing the decision to a capsule version.

* * * *

YOUR CORRESPONDENT would dive into the phone booth and spin the crank to call up a wire-chief named Peters at the A. T. & T. to string up the Rockford Republic, the Galesburg Mail, the La Porte Herald, the Michigan City Dispatch and the Aurora Beacon on a telephone circuit to spread the alarm. We may have cribbed a few county ax murders and mine disasters from the Chicago papers in those days, because, for a fact, we didn't have much more equipment than a kickpress, a monkey-wrench youth and unlimited enthusiasm. But our Supreme Court stuff was drawn straight from the wood and our coverage on the Scotus was rather special.

Mr. Conkle—and we always call him Mister, every one of us, to the day he died, although Bickel was his boss by that time—was the descendant of a long line of Methodist ministers and an offish but, in his growly, paternal way, a gentle boss.

We had no union and worked from 7 to 6 every day but Sunday. On Saturdays, however, we worked from 7 a. m. until 4 o'clock Sunday morning, with no one getting overtime pay except the telegraph operators. They had a union and drew more money than even Mr. Conkle. But, although some of us got as little as $10 a week and the boss himself got only $35, there wasn't any serious unrest.

* * * *

ROSCOE JOHNSON, who came along to be president of the operators' union, used to tell me late on Saturday nights that there was nothing to the telegraph business. Because—you just wait and see, he would say—one of these days someone will invent a coffee grinder which will operate telegraphic typewriters by electricity in a hundred places at once along thousands of miles of wire and the telegraph operator will be as dead as the town crier.

He used to say that these electrical telegraph machines would ring a bell where the operator then sang out his stirring cry of "Flash!" and a red light would twinkle and the gadgets would churn and type out the decision faster than human fingers could jiggle the bug to make the dots and spaces and dashes. And Roscoe was right.

Most of the nonunion reporters and writers who passed through the dingy shop outscored the brass men with their union, although it was a pure gamble on their rugged individualism and, of course, their luck. In ability, in our respective lines, the operators and the nonunionists of the so-called literary side were about even.

* * * *

ONE SATURDAY when I was about 17 I went out for a midnight schooner of lunch with an old-time floating operator named Jack McCloskey, one of the first wireless men. He told me at the bar of the Briggs House that he had been to London when Alfred Tennyson died. He said the newsboys on the street that foggy night sold placard editions of Tennyson's poem "Crossing the Bar."

I recalled the conversation that foggy night in London last winter when Rudyard Kipling died. But the death of Mr. Kipling was very ill-timed, and they gave him a left-handed, absent-minded funeral, because the King was dying at the time and his ceremonies smothered those for the poet of the empire.

I have resented the cheap abuse of the word "Flash!" in radio broadcasts in relation to cheap divorces and cheap engagements by cheap people. With my early training I regard it as an important word to be used only by those who are legitimate members of the newspaper profession on tremendous occasions, such as major decisions of the Scotus.

The Silent Steed

By William Lyon Phelps

Return Of The Bicycle.

The Silent Steed is coming back; it is returning in every country in the world.

In England since 1931 there has been an increase of 95 per cent on the main highways. And of all the crowded bicycle thoroughfares of Great Britain, the one most crowded, the one where more bicycles pass every minute than anywhere else, is Magdalen Bridge at Oxford.

The British Ministry of Transport Traffic Census recently gave out the official figures; which show that for 16 hours of every day 20 bicycles cross this bridge every minute.

* * * *

One result of this enormous increase in the use of the bicycle is a widespread demand—rapidly becoming universal—for the creation of special cycle-tracks on the edge of the main roads.

I saw a good many of these on the Continent last year. And I remember that long before we had any good roads in the United States, there were a few bicycle thoroughfares; a very narrow, but hard, smooth path at the side of the road reserved exclusively for the use of cyclists. The first one of these I saw was between New Haven and Wallingford, in Connecticut.

* * * *

It seems unfortunate that in the old days when bicycles were so common, nearly all the highways were so bad; and that now, when everywhere there are magnificent roads, the automobiles make bicycle-riding so dangerous. Dangerous or not, there are every month more bicycles in every city in America. And I believe the time is not far off, when there will be bicycle paths along the sides of our great highways.

Gladstone said the bicycle was the most practical of all modern inventions.

Silencing The Workers

Of all the devices used by employers against workers, the "blackball" is the most universally, and rightly, hated by the working people. It amounts to a check list, so that a person discharged from one company finds employment denied him in all the related companies.

American workmen will do well to notice that Germany has organized the blackball system on a nation-wide basis. Every manual, clerical and technical worker must have his "work book," in which his detailed record is kept.

Thus 22,000,000 Germans enter what amounts to an indirect slavery, or at least it will appeal in that light to American workers. Certainly it is little wonder that when this is added to the coercive methods which have gone before, there are no disorders in German industry. But it is an ominous quiet.

The Generalissimo

China Wants Chiang Kai-shek To Avoid Airplane Travel, Knowing That No One Could Fill His Boots As Army Leader.

By James Shen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Nanking.

WHAT, IF ANYTHING should happen to China's virtual dictator, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, at this moment? It would be a difficult question to answer, but one thing is certain, that it would be a great disaster to China, perhaps more disastrous than the occupation of the Manchurian provinces by Japan and another major flood along the Yangtze River.

On October 29, the Generalissimo (for that is how he is usually identified in China) celebrated his fiftieth birthday. Despite the crushing burdens of military affairs, foreign policies and the Herculean task of wielding what once were loosely scattered geographic and political units into the semblance of a united nation under the central government at Nanking, he is enjoying excellent health.

Ordinarily, one would not worry about his health. However, things in China are not quite ordinary. For instance, murder as a means of removing political foes is often resorted to in this country of incessant changes and developments. Only last November Premier Wang Ching-wei was seriously wounded by assassins. During the trial of arrested suspects, it was revealed that the Generalissimo had been their first choice.

There is another source of danger. Probably, the Generalissimo is one of the few statesmen in the world who does most of his traveling by airplane. It is not known whether he drives a car, but certainly he is no flier. Instead, he is always a passenger in his private planes, of which he has four: one Ford, one Douglas, one German Junker and one Italian Savoia-Marchetti, which was a gift from Mussolini.

The Generalissimo takes to flying not as a sport but out of necessity. China is a vast country and in some of its remote parts neither highways nor railroads are existent. But every time the Generalissimo takes off, the nation waits breathlessly until word is received of his safe arrival.

Death Of Chiang Would Rock Nation.

WOULD CHINA sink again into the abyss of chaos and domestic strifes if Generalissimo should go? Gen. Yuan Shih-kai, China's first president, who died in 1915, held the country together with his iron hand. With his death, it was split into a number of warring provinces ruled by selfish generals, to whom nationalism meant absolutely nothing. This state of affairs lasted for nearly 12 years until Gen. Chiang Kai-shek came upon the scene with his Nationalist troops in 1926-1927.

Would history repeat itself if anything should happen to the Generalissimo? The answer has mere possibility of being in the negative than otherwise. While it is true that he united China with his army, this unity has been strengthened greatly by constructive and progressive forces of a permanent nature. The spread of education and with it a high degree of nationalism, the construction of highways and the unification of the nation's currency system, are all factors contributing toward the cause of real and lasting unity.

The dramatic rapidity with which the recent revolt of Kwangtung and Kwangsi was liquidated proves conclusively the existence of a strong national consciousness, which has been made more forceful and unresistible by the constant pressure of Japan. Paradoxical it may sound, Japan will be remembered for accelerating the unifying processes of China.

With the proclamation of a new constitution for China in November and the end of the Nationalist Party's regime, another element of stability will be introduced into the Chinese body politic. The Generalissimo has openly declared that he would not become a candidate for the presidency, but he will be elected just the same. He has brought about this new unity and the nation thinks he should be the one to nurture it to maturity. Yet, if he should suddenly drop from the Chinese stage, it will not be impossible to find someone to play his political role.

General Irreplacable As Military Leader.

THE GREATEST QUESTION mark is one that hovers over the army. The Generalissimo has risen to power and has stayed there since 1927, primarily due to his control over the army. While his political astuteness is seldom equaled, his genius in military organization and tactics excells that of all Chinese generals. At present he has at least 500,000 well-disciplined men under arms, whose loyalty to him as the commander in chief and to the Central government, which he represents, is unquestionable. In addition, he has the support of troops formerly led by others and now taking orders from him and the Central government.

Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, the famous "Christian general," would have made a good candidate. He is now vice chairman of the military affairs commission, highest military organ in the land, of which the Generalissimo is the chairman. He, however, has been out of direct contact with his troops too long. He no longer commands a single soldier.

How about Gen. Chang Hueh-liang, the "Young Marshal?" He is now heading an anti-bandit campaign in the northwestern provinces on behalf of the Generalissimo. But whatever possibility he might have had in controlling China's army after the Generalissimo is gone was wiped out by his nonresistance in face of Japanese troops in Manchuria in 1931-1932.

A stronger contender is Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, who figured prominently in the recent revolt of Kwangsi province against Nanking. Noted as a great military organizer, Gen. Pai is probably the only Chinese commander to whom the Generalissimo would take off his hat for ability as a soldier. And then there is Gen. Ho Yin-ching, the minister of war. A close friend of the Generalissimo, Gen. Ho has distinguished himself as a capable soldier. Last year he was sent to Peiping to frustrate a Japanese-inspired independence movement in North China. A great number of Chinese divisional commanders were his students in the Whampoa Military Academy in Canton, which is China's West Point.

Gen. Chen Cheng Seen As Dark Horse.

YET THERE IS a "dark horse" in the contest. He is a youthful commander about whom no one knows too much and who is a total stranger outside China. Perhaps only the Generalissimo himself knows his abilities and potentialities as a military leader. He is Gen. Chen Cheng, now director of the military readjustment committee of the military affairs commission.

When the northern drive of the Nationalist army under Gen. Chiang began in 1926, Gen. Chen was only a company commander, but he quickly rose to command a regiment and then became field commander of the artillery corps. He participated in practically all the major battles during the 1926-1927 campaign against the northern warlords. During the last few years, he was the field commander in one rout of anti-bandit forces in central China. He rendered meritorious services in cleaning up Kiangsi, for years stronghold of Chinese Communist bandits, who are often referred to as China's "Red Army."

When Gen. Chen Chi-tang's revolt in Kwangtung ended in a fiasco last July, Gen. Chen was one of a few trusted men whom the Generalissimo sent down to Canton to carry out military reforms in that southern province which has been giving endless irritation and trouble for more than five years.

Thus, the whole contest boils down to a "duel" between Gen. Ho Yin-ching, the minister of war, and Gen. Chen Cheng, the young commander. Which of the two will eventually carry on the Generalissimo's military role after he is gone remains to be seen. Neither of them, however, will command the loyalty of China's army as completely as the Generalissimo himself.

At the present stage of her destiny, China simply cannot afford to let anything happen to the Generalissimo. This explains why recently there has been an increasingly audible plea that the Generalissimo should not do so much of his traveling by airplane.

Rule, Britannia

By Barnet Nover.

The Courting Of John Bull.

IT HAS BEEN written in a thousand places that Britain's day is done and by none with more certainty than loyal subjects of the crown of Windsor.

Englishmen are their own most ardent critics. If temperamentally inclined to conceal their enthusiasms they are never averse to weeping in public and in print over the vanishing glories of their ancient land. Indeed a fat anthology of lamentations can be compiled from the outpourings of disheartened Britons. Recurrently over a period of several centuries they have written black pages regarding their country's fate. Lord Macauley was not alone in projecting on the screen of the future the image of a visitor from a remote land sitting on a broken arch of London bridge and sketching the ruins of St. Paul's. Only this possibility has, to modern Englishmen, seemed more imminent than it did to Macauley.

Recently much lumber has piled up for that house of gloom Englishmen are all too ready to build. A few years ago it was the Washington treaty which seemed to mark the end of Britain's greatness. No longer, said ardent British patriots, does Britannia rule the waves. The very foundation stone of British power had been removed, they complained with bitterness, by statesmen of a softer breed than those who once directed the destinies of the Empire. The wily Yankees had put one over on stupid John Bull; had got him to give up that supremacy on the seas which had been his for centuries.

LATER IT was the spectacle of the little brown men of Osaka beating the spinners of Manchester at a game in which the latter had been supreme for generations which aroused gloomy forebodings in Great Britain. And that succession of body blows which have fallen on John Bull during very recent months has given further warrant for the belief, loudly voiced by Englishmen, that it was time for another Gibbon to write another Decline and Fall—this time of the British Empire.

When it wasn't Gandhi it was the Arabs of Palestine or the Nationalists of Egypt and South Africa, or De Valera. And, for understandable reasons, British consternation has grown enormously as a result of Mussolini's successful defiance of the British lion; of Hitler's refusal to answer Downing Street's polite query as to his intentions; of little Portugal's balkiness in the face of British pleas that it observe the nonintervention agreement.

AND YET at a moment when many Englishmen are convinced that never in history has Great Britain's prestige been at so low an ebb, never have its policies been more confused, uncertain and fumbling; never has its once powerful voice aroused less response, what do we actually find?

We find that there is no nation in Europe more courted than Great Britain. To win the United Kingdom over to a policy of friendliness and cooperation with the Third Reich, Herr Hitler has just sent to London what he considers the best horse in his diplomatic stable. To remove one obstacle in Von Ribbentrop's path, the order has been given to the press to cease its clamor for colonies; at the same time the Colonial League has been dissolved.

Hitler's fellow-dictator, Mussolini, is also not disguising his eagerness to come to terms with the nation upon which, not so long ago, he poured all the vials of his scorn and wrath. As an admirer of Napoleon's he realizes that the Little Corporal may have had his Austerlitzes, but that there was also Waterloo and in the long run it is the latter that counted most.

BUT THE DICTATORS are not alone in wooing John Bull. M. Blum is assiduously engaged in doing the same thing. So are the Russians, the Magyars, the Poles, the Greeks and many others. And their efforts are all the greater because, while Great Britain still possesses formidable reserves of power, its policies today are so uncertain.

It is not profitable to woo one who has already been won. Neither Mr. Roosevelt nor Mr. Landon made speeches in the Solid South during the recent campaign. To be sure, as France has discovered to its consternation in the case of Belgium, there is such a thing as taking one's partner too much for granted. But no one is taking Great Britain for granted. Its head may be bloody from recent blows but its smile is still regarded as a favor worth winning.

In a very real sense, therefore, Great Britain today holds in its grasp the key to European peace. If it has during recent years bungled the job of leading and directing the forces of order and stability on that continent all is not yet lost by any means. On the contrary, the very fact that no nation feels itself powerful enough permanently to defy the British Empire is a sign that there is still time for a new start.

From that point of view Capt. Eden's program speech in the House of Commons Wednesday is heartening. For in restating the British belief in the League of Nations and in declaring Britain's determined opposition to the exclusion of Russia or any other nation from the benefits of peace pacts now under discussion, he and his government have performed a real service in the cause of European appeasement.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Post-Mortem Huddle.

Mr. Lemke—Where am I?

Mr. Smith—I wish you wouldn't keep asking that question.

Mr. Landon (to Lemke)—What were you running for, anyhow?

Mr. Lemke—I was running for the Presidency.

Mr. Landon (with great relief)—Then I wasn't the only victim!

Mr. Lemke—I just can't understand it.

Mr. Smith—Understand what?

Mr. Lemke—The election.

Mr. Smith—That was no election; it was a testimonial.

Mr. Lemke (to Father Coughlin)—I thought you said we could swing 9,000,000 votes away from Roosevelt?

Father Coughlin—I don't recall it.

Mr. Lemke—Can I refresh your recollection?

Father Coughlin—I hope not!

Mr. Smith—This certainly leaves me in an embarrassing position.

Father Coughlin—You think you're in an embarrassing position! What about me?

Mr. Smith—Your case is different; the public had given up trying to understand you.

Father Coughlin—Is that so? I made my position as clear as you did.

Mr. Lemke—Yeah? Just about!

Mr. Landon—Think of it! Only two States! Why, Hoover did better than that.

Mr. Smith—Cheer up; you're better off than nearly any man in politics.

Mr. Landon—how so?

Mr. Smith—You know exactly where your friends are

Mr. Landon—I was convinced the American people were getting sick of regimentation, radicalism, threats to the Constitution, et cetera.

Mr. Smith—I had the same hallucination.

Father Coughlin—I'm still trying to figure out just what my influence was?

Mr. Landon—That's easy. Without it, Roosevelt might have lost a third State. You were a great help to him from start to finish. Now I know why the bishop didn't silence you.

Father Coughlin—Why?

Mr. Smith—He wanted to be sure Roosevelt won.

Mr. Hamilton—Tscht! Tscht!

Mr. Landon—John, I wish you'd stop doing that. You sound like a leaking tire.

Mr. Hamilton—And that's what I feel like.

Mr. Smith—Well, Alf, what'll we do now?

Mr. Landon—I dunno. I think I'll take a walk. Wanna come?

Mr. Smith—Me take another walk! I should say not!

U. S. Will Seek Peace of World At Conference

Hull Says Delegation Will Also Urge War's End in Western Hemisphere.

By the Associated Press.

Peace throughout the world as well as the abolition of war from the Western Hemisphere were outlined yesterday by Secretary Hull as the principal objectives of the 21 American Republics which will be represented in the Inter-American Peace Conference convening at Buenos Aires December 1.

On the eve of the departure of the American delegation to the conference, which the Secretary of State will head, Hull told a delegation of the People's Mandate Committee to End War:

"Dark and threatening clouds overhang the international horizon in many parts of the world. Our delegation and, I am sure, all those whom we shall meet are keenly aware of the gravity of our task and the magnitude of our opportunity. We hope and pray that our efforts will meet with full measure of success."

Secretary Hull received the delegation of men and women, numbering more than two score in his office at the State Department, whence his remarks were broadcast by radio.

The visiting delegation was headed by Dr. Mets Glass, of Lynchburg, Va., president of the American Association of University Women. Speaking on behalf of the committee, Mrs. Gerard Swope, of New York, and Rabbi Phillip S. Bernstein, Rochester, N. Y., called upon Secretary Hull to assume leadership of a program for the reduction of armament by international treaty.

"Because we are convinced that the present race in armaments will lead inevitably to war," Mrs. Swope said, "we urge a truce in arms and initiation of a world treaty for reduction of armaments."

Hull asserted that the Montevideo conference three years ago contributed greatly to the strengthening of the "good neighbor" policy among the American republics.

"It is our sincere hope," he added, "that at the approaching conference these friendly relations will be carried to a still higher level."

The Foreign Policy Association today released a report prepared by Charles A. Thomson, one of its experts, asserting that the significance of the Buenos Aires conference "may eventually be measured by the degree to which it influences the development of regionalism in the new world."

Declaring that the drift toward war in Europe has created a more favorable attitude toward inter-American cooperation, the report added:

"If the Buenos Aires conference is to achieve its primary objective, it must knit more firmly the ties which unite the American republics. Its achievements will prove deceptive, however, unless it recognizes also the political and economic bonds which join the nations of the Western Hemisphere to the rest of the world."

War in Offing, Masses Warned By Voroshiloff

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 6.—Defense Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff warned tonight "nations of the world are feeling more sharply the approach of a new imperialist war."

His was the major address at the nineteenth annual celebration of the Russian revolution.

"The worst enemies of the toilers—imperialists of every shade and denomination—are continuing frenzied preparations for new pillage and usurpations," Voroshiloff said, "and the implacable enemies are preparing to attack Russia.

"The Soviet Union is firmly determined that its red army be prepared to rout the enemy on whatever territory they may dare to appear.

Says Ruin Is Proposed.

"They (enemies) dream of transforming our flourishing fatherland into ruin; or ravaging our prosperous Socialist cities and villages; of making the free citizens of the great Soviet Union enthralled slaves."

The celebration was opened today by Josef Stalin, general secretary of the Communist Party, strong-looking and in jovial humor.

The secretary general of the Communist party laughed and joked with colleagues on the stage of the Bolshoi Theater during the two-hour program, but did not make a speech.

Before the actual celebration was begun, the Communist International in its annual revolutionary manifesto called upon workers the world over to give "actual aid" to supporters of the Spanish Madrid government.

Urges Aid to Madrid.

"Workers and toilers of all countries," it read, "follow the example of the Soviet proletariat, give actual aid to the Spanish people.

"With your mass action, terminate the criminal intervention of the German, Italian and Portuguese fascism in Spain.

"Put an end to the supplying of the insurgents with munitions.

"Compel your ruling classes to terminate the blockade of the Spanish government which they have not employed against Germany, Japan and Italy in their destruction of the freedom and independence of othre peoples.

"All material means for opposing the Fascist rebellion must be given to the Spanish government."

Col. Hurban Named Czech Envoy Here

Col. Vladimir E. S. Hurban, former Czechoslovakian minister to Sweden, was appointed envoy to Washington, it was announced yesterday in a dispatch from Praha.

The new minister, who is 53, succeeds Dr. Ferdinand Veverka, who on August 24 last was transferred to Vienna. He is a close friend of President Edouard Benes and a staunch champion of the present Czechoslovakian alliance with the Soviets.

Since the departure of Dr. Veverka, the legation business has been conducted by Dr. Josef Nemecek, charge d'affaires.

Col. Hurban is not unknown to Washington since at one time he served here as military attache.

Trade, Peace Pan-American Parley Topics

Tariff Reductions Sought to Promote "Good Neighbor" Policy.

This is the first of three articles by the Associated Press representative who will accompany the United States delegation to the Inter-American Conference at Buenos Aires. The delegates will sail tomorrow.—Editor.

By the Associated Press.

Promotion of peace and expansion of mutually profitable trade between 21 American republics will be the principal subjects for discussion at the Inter-American Conference opening December 1 at Buenos Aires.

In an effort to pull tighter the friendly strings which hold the United States and her 20 sister republics together as "good neighbors," the Washington delegation will seek to extend commercial relations in the markets of the Western Hemisphere.

The aftermath of the world depression saw Great Britain, Germany, Japan, France and other great trading nations making renewed and vigorous bids for Latin America's trade, long a sphere for profitable buying and selling of needed raw materials and manufactured articles by importers, exporters and manufacturers of the United States.

Hull Seeks New Trade.

The United States, under the reciprocal trade program pushed by Secretary of State Hull, is depending on progressive Yankee business methods and ingenuity to retain its third of a billion dollar stake in Latin American sales and—through trade pacts that reduce tariff rates and artificial trade barriers—capture an even greater share of Central and South American business.

Hull, "father" of the reciprocal trade program, will be the chief American "salesman." He will be assisted by Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary, and a corps of Latin-American and economic experts.

Their chief selling point will be the mutually beneficial results secured from reducing duties; removing exchange control, quota restrictions, and other artificial blockades in trade channels; and extending the benefits to other nations through the unconditional-most-favored-nation clause, the cornerstone of the American program.

As samples Hull has the eight trade pacts already signed with Latin-American countries (in addition to six with European nations) which he contends have stimulated the buying and selling of important commodities resulting in widespread improvement in the general economic situation.

Trade between the United States and Latin America — according to the latest available Department of Commerce tabulations — has continued to show the healthy increases started in 1935.

During the first eight months of 1935 the United States sold goods valued at $247,634,000 to Latin-American nations.

During the same period in 1936 sales were $271,300,000—an increase of $23,666,000.

The 20 Latin-American nations also increased their sales of products, chiefly raw material, to this country. The first eight months of 1935 Americans purchased $349,562,000 worth of their goods. During the same period this year American purchases were increased to $362,028,000 — an increase of $12,466,000.

To maintain that trade—and increase it—the United States must meet extraordinary competition (especially from Germany and Japan) and solve the questions raised by exchange control systems, quota restrictions, tariff concessions granted other nations and other important trade and financial problems.

Madrid Defenders Lure Foes in City to Death

Toledo, Spain, Nov. 6 (AP).—Government refugees told Fascist officers tonight of the favorite method of Madrid's defenders were using to discover enemy sympathizers in their midst.

Government supporters of unimpeached loyalty, they said, would run through the streets of Madrid shouting the Fascist war cry: "Viva Espana." Those residents who ran out of buildings and looked happy in their belief the Fascists had entered Madrid were shot on the spot.

The government forces also have executed 60 prominent Fascist sympathizers recently, the refugees said.

Farley Visions 'Easy Sailing' For Legislation

Says Victors 'Rode In' With Roosevelt; Reports $500,000 Deficit.

James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, yesterday said he foresaw easy sailing for Administration legislation in the next Congress, because most of the Senators and Representatives elected last Tuesday "rode in on the President's coat tails" with pledges to support the Administration.

Farley returned to his office in the capacity of Postmaster General for one day. He will leave tomorrow for New York prepared to sail for Ireland. He expects to return to Washington about December 1 to resume his cabinet duties. While he would not discuss his own future, he made it clear he had no intention of resigning immediately.

To reports that he would go into private employment, Farley remarked he "hadn't been offered any kind of a job."

Deficit of $500,000.

The Democratic chairman revealed that the party had spent about $3,000,000 in the campaign and that it had wound up with a deficit of about $500,000.

"But I'm not worrying about that," he said. "One Jackson Day dinner would fix that up."

He said that about $500,000 had been spent for radio broadcasts and about $100,000 for campaign buttons. He said that when the campaign budget was made up the item of buttons had been overlooked.

The one person who deserves most credit for the landslide of votes, Farley said, is the President himself. Labor, he said, helped more than it ever aided a successful candidate before.

Hails Colored Vote.

The colored vote, Farley believes, also was an important factor. He estimated that in the North 70 to 80 per cent of the colored voters cast their ballots for the President. He said many women voted for the President because they had confidence in his foreign policies, and that young people generally voted for him in larger proportions than the older generation.

"People in every community," he said, "appreciated what was accomplished in their communities by Federal agencies."

Farley called attention to the fact that 39 of the 48 States Governors are Democrats. He predicted that in the next election the party would elect three more Governors, in Maryland, New Jersey and California.

Social Security Drive.

The last minute Republican drive against the Social Security act did the Republicans more harm than good, the national chairman asserted.

"You can't tell employes how to vote," he said.

He denied there had been any intimidation of WPA workers and advocated Federal legislation to make coercion of voters a crime.

Asked whether his early prediction that the campaign would be "the dirtiest in history" had been fulfilled, he replied that "it was more than fulfilled."

Members of the House who ran on the Lemke Union Party ticket as well as on the Democratic ticket are in for trouble, Farley indicated. He declared they "are not deserving of the same consideration as Democrats."

Christian Science Held Way to Health

As man discovers the true nature of God, he discovers the true nature of himself, Colin Rucker Eddison, Christian Science lecturer, declared at a public meting last night in Constitution Hall.

"Just as he abandons old false beliefs about God, so the Christian Scientist abandons wrong concepts of man, and strives to identify himself and others always with the spiritual reflection of his Maker," Eddison and discussing "The Science of Christian Healing."

"The thought of man as expressing the perfection of God, which at first may seem new and strange, speedily grows natural. As the true idea of God and man becomes established in consciousness, healing takes place. This change in thought need not be complete before it can help us.

"As soon as it begins to come about it brings better health in the widest sense of that word. Every day it is being proved that men and women who have been suffering from illness or unhappiness, from the ravages of selfishness, from a sense of inability to cope with the tasks before them, are finding in Christian science health of body, health of mind, health in their business, health in their relations with their fellow men."

Popular Patricia Parker Will Be Bride Of Martin Maloney in Presidio Wedding

Army Officer's Daughter Made Host of Friends in Washington.

By Marylyn Revee.

From the West Coast comes news of an approaching marriage of much interest to Washington. Maj. and Mrs. Arthur William Parker today will announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Patricia Parker, to Mr. Martin Maloney, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Maloney, of San Francisco and Sacramento.

The Parkers left Washington last spring for their new station in California and were joined in August by their daughter, who made the trip through the canal on the same boat with Miss Lucille Elliott and the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Vogel, who were bound for Hawaii.

Miss Parker, as a typical Army girl, received her education in several schools, usually attending those nearest her father's post. During the past four years, however, when her family resided in Washington, she was in California, Hawaii and New York, coming here only about a year ago. During the past 12 months, she was one of the most popular young ladies in the city, and every evening one was certain to see this petite blonde at the Shoreham, Mayflower or Heigh-Ho, surrounded by a circle of admirers. When she sailed from New York, almost the entire younger set deserted Capital or summer homes and met at the Army base in Brooklyn to see off the U. S. A. T. Republic.

After finishing school and having a glorious time out in the islands, Miss Parker returned to the "mainland," her mind quite made up to find something in addition to parties to pass time. Shortly after her arrival in New York she was busily engaged in modeling, and after rising to the top with Janice Jarrett, who is one of her closest friends, she "retired" from the field and returned to Washington to join her family. Her sister, Mrs. Marjorie Parker Williams, and brother, Mr. John Parker, are now making their home here, and both are popular members of the service as well as the "cave dweller" sets.

Mr. Maloney is the grandson of Mrs. Charles K. McClatchy and the late Mr. McClatchy, publishers of the Sacramento Bee and other Bee papers in California. Following in the footsteps of the other members of his family, the prospective bridegroom is on the staff of the Sacramento paper. He and his bride will make their home in Sacramento following their marriage.

The wedding will take place in the chapel at the Presidio of San Francisco on December 2. Miss Parker has chosen for her attendants Miss Olivia Nolte, of San Antonio; Miss Janice Jarrett and Mrs. George Mundy and Mrs. Lee Cather, who are returning from the Philippines, and will arrive in San Francisco the day before the wedding. Following the ceremony there will be a large reception at the Mark Hopkins.

Miss Patricia Parker, whose parents, Maj. and Mrs. Arthur William Parker, have announced her engagement to Mr. Martin Maloney, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Maloney, of San Francisco and Sacramento. The wedding will take place in the Presidio of San Francisco Chapel on December 2. Before going to Sacramento, her father's new station, Miss Parker and her parents made their home at the Kennedy-Warren in this city.

After a wedding trip to New York City, Mr. Pulliam and his bride will reside at 1368 Euclid street.

Le Vin-Gaines Nuptials Held

In the presence of members of the two families, Miss Miriam R. LeVin, daughter of Mrs. Ruhe LeVin, of Allentown, was married yesterday to Mr. John LeRoy Gaines, son of Mrs. John S. Gaines and the late John S. Gaines, of Stonlea, Warrenton. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride wore the wedding dress of the bridegroom's mother, made with a short train, tight bodice and antique lace trimming. Her headdress was of lace and her tulle veil was fastened with gardenias. Miss Mildred Foster Gaines, the bridegroom's sister, was her only attendant.

Mr. A. Ludlow Clark, of New York City, was best man for his brother.

A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Gaines will live in Washington.

Miss Marsh Entertains.

Miss Betty Marsh entertained the Post-Deb Bridge Club last night at her home. Her sister, Miss Genevieve Marsh, who will make her debut this season, is at home for the week-end from Sweet Briar College, where she is a student, and was a guest at the gathering of the club.

The Merry Whirl

by MARYLYN

When the Latvian Minister wants music, he likes lots of it. One evening at the legation when he and Mme. Bilmanis—who has picked up an amazing amount of English during her short time here—were entertaining a group of music-loving friends, the envoy had been playing the piano and, after vainly trying to persuade some of the guests to contribute their bit of talent, turned to a music box. A cute, quaint little affair, after being wound up it gave forth the tinkling sounds of a wedding march. Not content with just one melody-provider Dr. Bilmanis strode across the room and set off still another music box, and continuing his game, to the surprise and amusement of those present, let the radio add its voice to the symphony.

Minnie, the oddly marked black and white feline of the household, was sitting under one of the chairs, purring and utterly at peace with the world. All the notice she took of the added sound effects was a gradually increased purring and a very exaggerated thumping of her tail on the floor in time to the "music."

Bob Phillips is quite the sport. Not only does he practically live in the saddle—that is, when time and work will allow, but being an officer in the Fairfax hunt is not enough, so he has taken up his abode in the clubhouse at Sunset Hills.

Capt. Edgar Tremlett Fell has almost as many titles as he has gold braid on his aide-to-the-governor uniform. But, he is a very tall and handsome person and gets away with it beautifully. He is special assistant to the attorney general of Maryland, royal Swedish V. C., professor of law, captain of the Fifth Infantry of the Maryland N. G., major in the World War, former secretary at our embassy in Madrid, B. A., M. A., LL. B., and Ph.D. What, we want to know, is the measurement of his calling card?

Jessica Johnson is off for New York with her final destination Yale. From what we have heard this young lady should have an autogiro, if she intends to get in all of the short stops she plans within the few days. The Yale visit is for the game today, then a round of parties up until train time tomorrow, then for the sleeper back home. As to the New York stop-over, that—we bet—is for some new fall finery.

Mrs. Agnes Messick Pollack has given up her home on Q street and is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Clagett Marbury.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman, Happily Married 25 Years to Short-Statured Husband, Gives Advice to 'Puzzled Polly.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Twenty-five years ago I found myself in much the same predicament as "Puzzled Polly," whose letter was answered in your column October 27. I was in love with a young man of short stature but of fine character. Nor did my parents want me, their only daughter, to marry him. They made rather slighting remarks about his lack of height and so on. Pinned down, they could think of nothing else really wrong with him, but they made various excuses as to why I should not marry him.

• • • •

However, I was sure that I cared for him and he for me, so I told my parents that unless they consented to our having a simple home wedding, which I really wanted, that we would just walk around to the parsonage and be married. We had the home wedding with our close friends present. I am happy for that.

• • • •

Today my father is dead, but my mother is devoted to my husband and he to her. He has constantly climbed in his work and has a nice position. We have together saved and own a comfortable home and can give our children all the educational advantages they need. True, we have not always found it easy; nor do we get by now without planning and rebudgeting and making some sacrifices. But life cannot be all roses. Sickness, reverses, numerous worries we have had, but never in all these years has he given me cause to even think that he gave so much as a fleeting thought to another woman. His love and tender devotion today make me one of the world's happiest women. He is respected and trusted by friends, employers and business associates.

• • • •

I am taller than he when I wear high heels and smart hats. But I wear them because I like to and he likes me to wear whatever makes me look nice and feel happy. The two tall men I could have married have not made as good husbands for the girls they did marry as my short husband has been to me. We have a son who is short also, and is called "Stubby," "Shorty" and "Tubby," as was his father in his youth. He is the same splendid type in his sophomore year at college as his father has always been.

• • • •

Lack of inches don't matter. Four, six, eight or even ten inches under 6 feet don't matter, if there is no lack of all the fine principles that mean a splendid and honorable man, who will be tender and faithful until death, and who will be a father whose children can admire, love and respect him.

• • • •

In stories, the heroes are ever tall, broad shouldered, either very handsome or of rugged countenance. And fictional Prince Charmings are ever tall and god-like. But take it from a woman who was born into a family of tall men, but who loved and married a short and not-so-skinny one, some of real life's Prince Charmings are short. Mine is; nor would I have him different.

• • • •

So, if "Puzzled Polly" is sure that she loves her short man and is loved by him as well, and that he has within his heart and being the manly traits she says he has, nothing else matters and parental objection to his stature will gradually fade away.

• • • •

Just one word of advice: Short-statured men are sensitive upon the subject of their height. I learned that long ago and have always respected that sensitiveness in my husband and my son. Happily, I have made both see that it is so unimportant in comparison with the qualities that really count.

HAPPY WIFE.

• • • •

DEAR HAPPY WIFE: Thank you for your letter. It corroborates my own opinion, given "Puzzled Polly," that she can afford to turn a deaf ear to ungenerous remarks concerning her young man's short stature, if she is entirely convinced that he is, in character and ability, "a man for a that," and that their love for each other is tender and true.

A Dwindling Romance.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About two years ago I moved to this town from Mississippi. At the time I was very much in love with a girl there, and think I still am. I thought I would be away from her only a few months, but the family decided to stay here, and so did I. I did, however, make a special trip down to see her after six months, and everything was still rosy. Then last winter I went down and attended a college near the one she was in, mainly to be with her.

• • • •

This winter I am working and not in a position to be with her for a while. She has written me very consistently up until the last two months, but I have had only one letter from her during the past eight weeks. It was just like the others, however, showing no diminution of affection. What would you advise me to do? I still like her lots.

MISSISSIPPIAN.

What to Do.

DEAR MISSISSIPPIAN: If you are not in a position to offer immediate marriage to the girl, nor she of an age to consider a proposal, and neither of you know your minds in the matter, you will probably just have to resign yourself to the possibility of losing her affections to some one else. You have probably heard the pithy saying: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder —of somebody else."

• • • •

The sharp decline in her correspondence may be taken as strong circumstantial evidence that her emotional enthusiasms have met a new magnet. The affectionate note sounded in her last letter may have been dictated by expediency; or it could very well be that she does have a deep and genuine affection for you; yet such a sentiment—born of a long-time pleasant relationship with a boy she admires and respects—would not necessarily prevent her giving her heart to a man nearer at hand. Time, distance and prolonged separation have a way of dissipating school-day romances, as well as those of a maturer cast.

• • • •

You have a choice of two things to do. One is to write her family, calling attention to her dwindling correspondence, and asking her point blank if she has met someone else she cares for more. You may say if this is true, that you are prepared to understand and bow to the inevitable; but that you would like to know the truth of where you stand with her, in order that you may conduct yourself accordingly. The other thing is to match silence and indifference with silence and indifference, and let her make the move to clear the atmosphere.

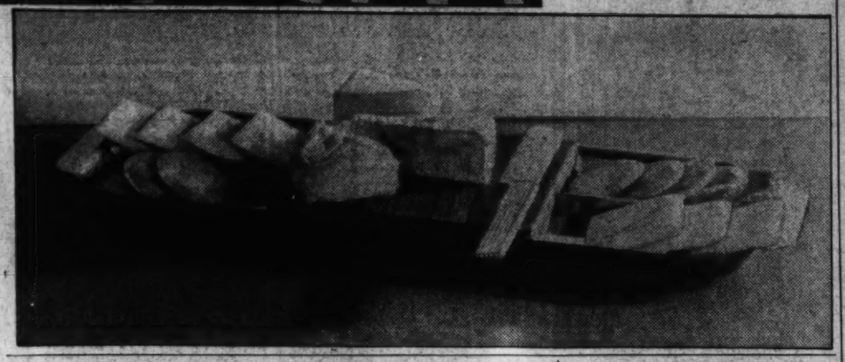
Savory Cheese for Informal Entertaining

The welsh rabbit (left) is an attractive and appetizing food to be served at informal party gatherings. It is good served with jellied mixed vegetables, whole wheat wafers, chocolate cake and coffee. This is not a difficult dish to make if you follow the simple rules of cooking slowly, over a low flame and not too long. The cheese tray (below) makes an attractive container for the snacks which furnish a bit of tang to any meal or cocktail. It is especially good with several kinds of cheese and crackers.



Cheese Dishes Are Delicious At This Season

Welsh Rabbit Is Suggested as Industry Plans National Week.

THE WELSH RABBIT supper is an excellent American custom and there is no more appropriate season in the year to serve this delightful cheese delicacy than National Cheese Week which starts tomorrow.

The Welsh Rabbit is a great dish that has survived many generations as an ordinary cheese dish and also as one of the aptest of all party-favorites for any climate or group of people.

People have considered the name of this dish a piece of whimsy, but it was named by a Welsh chieftian who was forced to substitute the cheese dish for the game course when entertaining several hundred guests. Since then it has been called into service many times.

Controversy Is Old.

During the War of Roses in England, there arose a great dispute about the number of kinds of cheeses to be used in a proper Welsh Rabbit. To this day, there are chefs of the old school, who insist that no Welsh Rabbit worthy of the name can possibly be made without three kinds of cheese.

In America we have learned that any good sharp American cheese will serve admirably as the base of this dish. Most housewives know already there are only two secrets in cooking with cheese. First, always cook it slowly, and, second, cook it over a low flame, and not too long. The reward for following these rules is a smooth, nog-stringing sauce of perfection.

Readily Digestible.

With such a Rabbit as this, the consumer has only pleasant dreams. In spite of the stories about midnight feasting, Welsh Rabbit has never deserved a reputation for indigestibility. Made properly, with a gentle mixture of cheese, liquid and seasonings, it is a readily digested food.

Welsh Rabbit is one of the most useful foods. It is a dish for pleasant party gatherings, an after-theater occasion, for a bachelor supper, or for those delightful autumn evenings when social dining is very much in order.

Welsh Rabbit is excellent for Sunday night supper with sliced tomatoes and mayonnaise, Genoese cakes sugared peaches and cream and hot tea or with jellied mixed vegetables with cooked salad dressing with relish, whole wheat wafers and chocolate cake and coffee.

The cheese and cracker tray has become a modern necessity with so much informal entertaining. Cheese seems to add just the right bit of tang to a meal or with a cocktail and when served with a variety of crackers is attractive and easily consumed. Several kinds of cheeses on the same tray make it interesting and especially appealing.

Welsh Rarebit.

Mix and blend 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon flour. Add 1 cup rich milk, stir until smooth. Add one-half pound sharp cheese, cut into small pieces and stir until smooth and melted. Add 1 teaspoon salt (one-quarter teaspoon mustard and few grains Cayenne if desired). Serve on crackers or thin, crisp toast.

Bacon Rarebit.

3 tablespoons bacon drippings
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ pound shredded "Creamed Old English Cheese"
1 teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
Salt, pepper
Toast
1 cup chopped bacon

Make a cream sauce with the bacon drippings, flour and milk. Add the shredded cheese and stir until it is melted. Add the seasonings and blend well. Serve on fresh toast and sprinkle each portion with the chopped crisp bacon.

Eggs Stuffed With Mushrooms.

Hard cook four eggs, cut in halves crosswise and remove yolks. Mix four chopped mushrooms, 1 teaspoon chopped pimento, 2 tablespoons cream, ½ cup soft crumbs, salt and pepper. Heat until very hot and stuff the eggs. Place them on toast and cover with cheese sauce. Place in over, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, until sauce bubbles, and garnish with bacon.

Cheese Sauce.

Cook eight slices of bacon in frying pan until crisp. Remove bacon to soft paper in dripping-pan and keep hot. Pour off into jelly glass all except 3 tablespoons fat. Add 3 tablespoons flour and when smooth add 1½ cups mlik. Stir until sauce boils and add ½ cup cheese grated or forced through food chopper, and the four hard-cooked egg yolks rubbed through a sieve.

High Hat Favored At Big Horse Show

Most Fashionable Affect Them in New York.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—High hats stole the fashion spotlight at the fifty-third National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden.

The most fashionable women grouped in the boxes at the opening matinee performance wore hats with high crowns. Black Persian toques, with two shades of red velvet twisted at the top of a tapering crown, black felt helmets, topped by fox heads, and fairly high toques, banded with a ribbon of blue feathers, were among the smartest chapeaux worn. Six inches was an average height for the tall hats. A number of older women chose models with lower crowns.

Black was the favorite costume color. Black coats and suits, with collars or wide revers of Persian lamb, were worn by dozens of women, most of whom chose to add a touch of color in hat trim, scarf, gloves or clip.

Cranberries Add Color and Flavor To Autumnal Dish

WHAT COULD liven up an autumnal meal both in color and flavor more than seasonable cranberries?

These need not be used simply in cranberry sauce as an accompaniment for roast turkey, but may be combined in appetizers, in jelly, spiced, in mince meat, in pies, in salads and in muffins and puddings. There are any number of interesting methods of using these small red berries, and possibly you have your own favorite recipe that is a little unusual.

Why not copy your cranberry recipe neatly and send it to the foods editor of The Washington Post so it will reach her not later than Saturday morning? You may be the winner of one of the five cash prizes being awarded for this contest.

The prizes are $3 for first, $2 for the second prize, and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

HE MADE A TEN-YEAR TEST WITH ALL-BRAN

Say good-bye to the headaches, the low spirits, the sleeplessness that often follow common constipation. Just read this letter:

"In 1926, I started using ALL-BRAN. And now, after ten years, during which I have put Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to a long, hard test, I am writing you this letter. It is better to eat this food and be in condition, than to resort to laxatives." —Bernard Altman, 63 Goodale Road, Mattapan, Mass.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will help you too. Its "bulk" absorbs moisture within the body, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system. Tests prove it is safe and effective.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Either as a cereal, or in recipes. How much better to use this food than to take patent medicines. Buy ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. (Adv.)

Charmers Influence Is Felt in Negligees

New York (AP).—The influence of that eighteenth century charmer—the Empress Josephine—is reflected in negligees designed with a flowing skirt breaking from a high waistline often accented by velvet ribbons of contrasting color.

Rich striped silks and stiff velvets make house coats designed on doublebreasted lines with fitted waists and full skirts while hand-quilted satin coats are cut on slender princess profiles.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 6.

NOW THAT the smoke of the political battle has drifted away, we old stodgy Murray Hillbillies like to gather around the open fires and talk of our neighborhood's big day, which struck like a puff adder just as the campaign was about to end.

ALICE HUGHES.

We're a quiet lot, here on Murray Hill, between the Vanderbilt Hotel and the Grand Central deppo. I doubt that we see more than 25,000 automobiles a day, hauling malefactors of great wealth to and from their Wall street hockshops. My neighbor, J. P. Morgan, retires very early, and as a result we have practically no night-life. So when we had both Presidential candidates right in our section on the Wednesday preceding the election, it was one of the most nervous and exciting times in the Hill's history, and we'll gab about it for months.

Yes, ma'am—just as Mr. Landon, with flashlights, coppers and crowds, was going into the Murray Hill Hotel, Mr. Roosevelt and his great cavalcade swept past up Park avenue. They were within a rock's toss of each other, and the crowds got all mixed up, and so did the whoops and hoots. Stenographers dumped wastebaskets out office window and telephone books, either whole or in shreds, filled the sunset air. Little old ladies who hadn't ventured out of the house since the first McKinley campaign creaked up and down on the curb, squeaking shrilly, and we must have had 500 policemen trying to keep the dear old things in order.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — Doug Ashley passed through here the other day on their way to England, and though I did my best, she still won't talk. In other words, the orders from Daddy still stand. But of course I haven't the faintest notion what she could say if she did talk. So it's all right.

• • • •

Connie Thurlow, that Park avenue debby who won the great picture-snapping contest a few nights ago by bringing in a photograph of a laundry horse's tired old feet, has now been hired by a local sheet to shoot candid pictures around town. Her first was a rather feeble effort—a high school football player drinking out of the water-bucket—but Connie snaps on . . .

The man with the toughest ax to hoe, or rather, row to grind, in town this fall is 37-year-old John Barbirolli, British-Italian conductor, who was chosen to wave the wand over our Philharmonic as successor to the immortal maestro, Toscanini. Poor chap. I'm afraid the old guard, tories to a degree, will do their odious comparing. Johnny got off on the right foot by saying "I am a simple man and a great lover of music. I study, and then I give the best I've got." Young Gene Ormandy is up against the same grief in Philly, where he now swings the stick in place of the adored "Stokie".

If you're a finger-nail gnawer you will welcome the new nail-shaped pieces of plastic material which can be pasted on over unsightly ones while they're growing out. So bite away, girls!

Former Spanish Queen Fast Shopper

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

WHEN former Queen Victoria Eugenia of Spain decided to go shopping, in New York, while on her recent visit to America, she did not dilly-daily. Forty-five minutes in the private showroom of Frances Clyne was all she needed to select a large part of her fall wardrobe.

The former Queen, who has always been noted for her good taste in clothes as well as for her statuesque blonde beauty, purchased clothes featuring simple sophistication.

Included in the royal wardrobe were a gray homespun wool suit, black hairy wool frock and black crepe evening gown. The suit consisted of a one-piece frock with shirred shoulder treatment and cord belt, over which was worn a hip-length jacket with tuxedo collar.

The onepiece sheer black wool frock was distinguished by a satin vestee of stiff white satin topped by a flower-like collar. To wear with this she chose a black velvet toque, pierced through the top by a long feather.

Her famous diamond and emerald brooch (the emerald pear-shaped pendant) is worn pinned to the side front of the frock-collar. Black triple sheer crepe fashioned the evening gown—the bodice draped and banded in crystal beads forming a Greek design.

Frances Clyne, who has designed clothes for "royal families" of America for two generations, was not dismayed at the sight of European royalty. Although she and the former ruler had never met, Miss Clyne is the possessor of a decoration from the Spanish government.

It is the Medalle del Humeanate, presented to her in 1926 for her activities in behalf of Spanish art, notably for her introduction into this country of Beltran Masses, the portrait painter.

Suit of gray homespun, trimmed with gray Persian lamb, consisting of one-piece frock and jacket. Hat, gray velour.

Evening gown of black sheer crepe, accented with crystal beading in Greek design. Underarm loops emphasize classic styling.

Afternoon frock of black wool designed for Victoria Eugenia of Spain; collar stiff white satin. Toque is black velvet.

Great Care Needed In Choosing Prints

What crimes are committed in the names of prints! Milo Anderson, Hollywood designer, says he never uses them unless he has no alternative. Orry Kelly uses them occasionally, but he goes over swatches of material by the hundred before he selects exactly the right pattern to form a yoke in a dress for Olivia de Havilland or to make a dress for Kay Francis.

Kelly advises against large patterns for street length fitted dresses. A rather broad and general rule is that the more material one uses in a dress the larger the print may be. Don't minimize the importance of measuring stripes, prints, checks, and plaids, all of which are good this season, with a discerning eye.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

John tried and tried to follow directions. He was facing Mrs. J. and it seemed to him natural to put out the same hand that she offered him, which was, of course, the one opposite to her right hand, that is, his left. His mother and Mrs. J. both thought that he was being wilfully naughty. They simply neglected to use their imaginations or their intellect to try to understand.

Right and left are purely arbitrary directions used for the convenience of human beings. There is no inherited instinct to guide a child. He must learn right from left as he learns north from south, and since most of his social training goes on in a looking-glass world where he must do the opposite thing from the person whom he is facing, the lessons are not easy.

The best way to teach a child left and right is to make a game of it from the time he is very little. Let him use either hand to greet people with until he has learned which hand is which.

Mrs. Josiah William Bailey Noted for Recipe for Pickled Oysters.

By Pattie Ellicott.

WHEN the ladies of the Senate meet for their weekly luncheon at the Capitol, there is rejoicing when they know that Mrs. Josiah William Bailey, wife of the Senator from North Carolina, is among those who are to provide the luncheon for that day.

They hope that her famed recipe for pickled oysters, honored by inclusion in the Congressional Cook Book, has been put to use for their benefit.

PICKLED OYSTERS.

2 quarts oysters, 1 pint vinegar, salt, red pepper and mace. Strain the liquor from oysters, boil with a little salt, red pepper, and mace; when the liquor has begun to boil, add the oysters; let them boil until pump; remove the oysters and put them in a jar; pour into the liquor the vinegar; allow the combined liquor and vinegar to boil one minute, then pour it over the oysters in the jar; put in refrigerator or other cold place; serve cold. Pickled oysters should be used within 24 hours from the time they are prepared and are delicious used as hors d'oeuvres or as a relish with the meat course.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By

Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Every once in a while we are startled by the appearance of a disease that is new—at least to us. As our civilization becomes more complex, as facilities for transportation increase, disorders that were confined earlier to isolated and remote districts are carried throughout the world.

This seems to be the situation with undulant fever, which is now acknowledged to be world-wide in distribution. Twenty-five years ago it was practically unheard of in the United States, although it had probably existed unrecognized for a number of years. Its rarity, however, led to confusion in the diagnosis and undoubtedly not a few typical cases were labeled typhoid fever, malaria, rheumatic fever, or influenza. It hardly seems tenable that we could have escaped so important an infection during the long period in which livestock, particularly goats and cattle, were imported for breeding purposes.

In this country cattle and hogs are the principal avenues through which the disease is disseminated, and there is no State in the Union in which some afflicted animals will not be found. The infection may be transmitted from cows through drinking of raw milk, the eating of butter made from unpasteurized cream, or by direct contact.

The prevalence of the fever among cattle is fairly extensive in some areas. In a certain tested locality nearly 10 per cent of the milk cows gave positive reactions. The average was about one to each herd and the chances are that those who used raw or unpasteurized milk from such sources were exposed many times.

Incubation May Be Brief.

After drinking polluted milk, symptoms usually develop in from five days to three week. As a rule the onset is insidious with general aching and a feeling of marked illness. Sometimes there is a chill, followed by severe headache, fever and pains in the back radiating to the hips. There is generally profuse sweating and rapid loss of weight. Now and then the skin and the teeth feel sore, and the discomfort in the back and in the head may be so intense as to be almost unbearable. After the acute period has passed—a few days to a week or more—the condition may settle down for a long pull. It is believed that some patients harbor the infection for years in a mild form with an occasional flareup of pain and fever.

The diagnosis may be exceedingly difficult. A positive check, however, is readily available and only a small quantity of the patient's blood is required. The suspected serum is added to a culture of the organisms—brucella melitensis—and if it causes them to clump together rather quickly the diagnosis is evident.

Our first clear-cut understanding of the disease came from David Bruce, who studied the malady on the island of Malta. He found the cause to be a microbe—which now bears his name—and proved that the drinking of raw goat's milk containing the germ was the source. As soon as the use of this fluid was stopped no further cases appeared.

The management of the disease in human beings is directed toward the relief of symptoms and every effort is exerted to make the patient as comfortable as possible. The use of vaccines has been advocated by some writers.

200,000 Cheer The President On His Return

Station Plaza Is Jammed, Avenue Crowded With Admiring Throng.

exclaimed, "I'm so glad to see you!" Dunn meant it. For him as for literally thousands of others, Roosevelt is not a person but a spiritual light.

Two little girls, shy and timid, Dorothea Dennis and Gloria Nichols, representing the American Hellenic Society, clambered onto the running board of a tan White House car and handed him a huge bouquet as he was trying to get into his black topcoat.

He thanked them, and the car, with son James Roosevelt and his wife beside him in the rear seat, crept slowly up a ramp to the street a running army of photographers, newsreel men, policemen, detectives and admirers trotting at his heels. Cheers rang out from the crowds on both sides.

100,000 in Plaza.

In a moment the Army Band at the top saluted him with a blast of brass and drums, and the car swung right toward the wide paved plaza, where fully 100,000 pushed and peered for a better view.

Plainly astonished at the hugeness of the crowd, the President looked about him wide-eyed, then broke into a beaming smile which was more of gratitude than exultation. He lifted his bouquet and flagged his friends with it, and they thundered back their approval.

It was the echo of cheers he had heard everywhere during his campaign—in Chicago, New York, Detroit, Philadelphia—but these were the first cheers of congratulation he had heard. Washington got the privilege of slapping the winner on the back.

Is Cheered Wildly.

His car pulled to a stop in the center of the plaza where he spoke to the throng in slow but positive words. As he uttered his salutation "My Frrie-nds!" the thousands interrupted with a prolonged volley of shouts. Then he went on, cheered at the end of every sentence:

"I am very glad to come back among you, my old neighbors.

"I formed a very good habit of coming to Washington when I was 5 years old and I am glad that that habit will not be broken during the coming four years.

"I have seen Washington grow during this half century and I am very proud and happy as an American in the wonderful Capital of ours, for it is not only the most beautiful city in all the world but I think it is one of the grandest cities to live in in all the world.

"This is a very wonderful greeting that you have given me on this wonderful day. I am very thankful to you and hope to see much of you in the next four years."

Speech Is Broadcast.

As radio carried his words to the world and newsreels recorded his beam for thousands of moviegoers everywhere, a horde of secret service men scanned the crowds for evildoers, but only friends and neighbors were there.

Next began the drive to the White House, with a motorcade of limousines packed with dignitaries to the rear and a group of motorcycle police ahead, while on both sides 11 bands played and thousands of tiny American flags lashed the air.

At Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue the crowd broke through rope lines, sweeping policemen and National Guardsmen aside like chaff, causing the President's chauffeur to stop. Motorcycles roared as police thrust the overflow backward, and the machine moved on.

Scores of those thrown back went home happy with the knowledge that they had been for a brief instant within reach of Roosevelt.

Again and again the throng broke loose. Those on the south side of the Avenue could not be restrained and flooded across the street to Roosevelt's side in waves. At Fourteenth street and Pensylvania avenue there was no holding them.

Forced to Stop Again.

Again the car was forced to stop. Policemen hand-in-hand were as a rope of tinsel. It took several minutes to clear the street this time, the Presidential car finally being routed over to the wrong side of the street in order to get through to the White House.

At this intersection was massed the largest pack after the station, although all Pennsylvania avenue was crowded. At Fourteenth the onlookers were 50-deep, office buildings were festooned with waving workers, the Treasury was solidly rimmed, and over all fluttered bits of torn paper.

Government employes freed for a few hours, school children off for the morning, numerous visitors who hurried here from out of town, housewives and babies, businessmen, laborers and everyone not kept at his job was out. One street car motorman, apparently unaware whose path he was crossing, plunged out into the Avenue, adding to the fun and confusion.

At the White House gate at the end of Treasury place, the President's car and his followers' were swallowed by the privacy of the executive grounds.

March to Portico.

But not for long. This crowd was not to be frustrated so simply. By the thousands it swept to the Pennsylvania avenue gates and marched to the White House portico, where it set up a happy, pleading cry for more.

For the first time in the memory of many present, a President of the United States came out onto the porch to greet his admirers. It was such a greeting and such a crowd as stormed Andrew Jackson's new home when he was inaugurated, but perhaps mindful of the wreckage of that distant day, Roosevelt did not invite the mob inside.

With Mrs. Roosevelt, who had driven to Washington the night before, he came out on the porch and waved and spoke to the rapidly swelling crowd.

"It was a grand party!" he called out. "Thank you! Thank you!"

Chant Goes Up.

In a moment he retired. But the crowd still hadn't had its fill. A chant went up like that of a football crowd crying for touchdowns: "We want Roosevelt! We want Roosevelt! We want Roosevelt!"

Once again the President appeared, and expectations were slightly gratified. Over the lawns and through flowerbeds, all over the portico, with children hanging perilously on pillars and balcony rails, the police indulgently trying to keep order, enjoyment and cries of pleasure swept, a tumult of people and emotions. But he did not stay long enough.

Still hungry, shouts again penetrated the White House. The President had to take a third curtain call. This time, as befits an idol, he brought some of his company on stage with him, secretaries, friends and visitors.

At last satisfied, the crowd dispersed, filing out with a sigh. Inside the President was talking over business with his aids. In 15 minutes he had his first conference of the day.

Careless Cat and Her Rescuer

Here is the black kitty that strayed unconcernedly into the path of the President's automobile. She was saved by Mrs. Frances Clark, and now they are fast friends.

Death Power Vested in Referee Under England's 'Mercy' Bill

Subject for 'Euthanasia' Must Request Act, Two Doctors Certify Incurable Nature of Illness Before Surgeon Is Given Right to Take Life.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 6.—A referee would be named to pass on the merits of each case under Britain's proposed "voluntary euthanasia" law to legalize "mercy killing" for incurables, under terms of the bill made public today.

Lord Ponsonby introduced the bill in Parliament this week.

Permission of the referee, who would be appointed by the Minister of Health, would be necessary before a life could be taken. Leave to kill an incurable could be granted only after the referee personally had interviewed the person desiring to die and had satisfied himself the petitioner understood what he was asking.

The proposed "easy death" might be administered only by a specially licensed physician in the presence of an official witness, who must either be a justice of the peace, a barrister, a solicitor, a physician, a clergyman or a registered nurse.

The act would not cover cases of serious accidents involving maiming or disablement. It would be restricted specifically to "illness involving severe pain of an incurable and fatal character."

Other provisions would require the petitioner to be at least 21 years old and of sound mind. He would be obliged to make the application for death in his own writing in the presence of two witnesses. The application would have to be accompanied by certificates from two physicians, one from the patient's family doctor and the other a specialist.

Miners Dine With King.

Throng Crashes 'One-Cop' Lines To Shout Welcome to President

Lone Policeman Powerless to Stay Tide at 14th and Pennsylvania; Other Quirks Highlight Roosevelt Course to White House.

The President, riding in triumph up Pennsylvania avenue, approached Fourteenth street when into the avenue, sweeping police and National Guard lines before them, surged hundreds of happy shouting well-wishers.

The Presidential car was forced to a momentary halt. It was surrounded immediately by alert Secret Service men. After a few frantic seconds, the procession moved on, leaving in its wake swirling scraps of torn paper, confetti and scattering throngs.

In the center of everything loomed the figure of a 6-foot, broad-shouldered policeman. His face was florid. His cap was askew. His tie was ripped. His uniform was mussed.

He turned to his sergeant and with wild gestures bellowed:

"Ten thousand persons . . . all coming straight at me . . . and you yell 'hold 'em—hold 'em!' My Gawd!"

Undismayed by all the hullabaloo at Union Station, a scrawny black cat sauntered from the curb and started directly in front of the President's touring car. An elderly woman darted into the street and snatched it up. She was immediately beset upon with shouts of:

"Let it go—it's good luck . . . look out, maybe it's a voter . . . send it to Landon . . . who opened the gate? . . . feed it to the elephants."

Curiosity sent one man on an inquiry tour from Union Station to The Post building.

"Please," he pleaded with a reporter, "Do you know what the orange and yellow flags flying between American flags on top of lamp-posts signify? I've asked at least 100 persons on the street . . . nobody seems to know . . . maybe it's some foreign country."

The reporter admitted ignorance and hastily placed a call for Commissioner George E. Allen.

"Oh," responded the Commissioner, "those flags were meant merely for decorations—something we had left over from Halloween."

An impromptu cheering section was established in front of the White House. Urged on by several self-appointed cheer leaders, the crowd chanted over and over again: "We want Roosevelt . . . we want Roosevelt!" until the Chief Executive finally appeared on the portico and waved a greeting.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who motored here from Hyde Park Thursday, remained at the White House yesterday and was first to greet the President when he arrived from his triumphal march up the Avenue.

With a broad smile and new "Garbo" hair dress, Mrs. James Roosevelt rode beside the President in his open car.

An over-zealous youngster, armed with a small box camera, stepped from the curb to photograph the Presidential car. Col. Edward Starling, Secret Service head, raised his arm and pointed at the boy. In a flash, the bewildered youngster was surrounded by Starling's men who grabbed his camera and continued on their way.

"You'll probably think I'm crazy," said one welcomer to a policeman along the parade route, "but will you please tie my bow tie?"

And then he explained that the alarm didn't go off and he was in a hurry to get downtown for the fireworks. His wife is visiting out of town.

"And I never could tie one of these darn things," the breathless young man panted as the policeman obliged and the crowd laughed.

Youthful members of the District National Guard, stationed along the avenue, had orders to face the crowd and stand at attention as the President passed. But there wasn't one who couldn't resist a glance at the Presidential auto.

"Umph," said a policeman as something hard struck him in the center of the back.

"Pardon me," said a woman as she dragged a kitchen chair through the crowd and settled herself to watch the fun.

E. B. Winslow Dies at 90, Headed Railroad Line

Portland, Me., Nov. 6 (AP).—Edward B. Winslow, 90, president of Winslow & Co., clay products manufacturers, and the Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad, died today. He was a director of the Maine Central Railroad, which operated the former line.

On his ninetieth birthday, September 20, Winslow said he had no intention of retiring.

D. C. Model Plane Contests Set Today

Sixty boys are expected to compete for the District Model Aircraft League championship, held for three years by Robert Wiehle, of 1615 Wisconsin avenue northwest, at 10 a. m. today at the Fort Myer drill field.

This is the league's ninth tournament, sponsored by the Department of Playgrounds. The contest today will be an exhibition of models in three outdoor classes. The tournament will be completed November 21 with the indoor contest at Constitution Hall, the championship being determined on points scored in the two events.

Entrants are divided into four groups, ace, pilot, junior pilot, and novice. Last year's winners in the latter three groups will again compete. They are Charles Kaman, 17, of 5731 Third street northwest, pilot class champion; Carl Wiehle, 15-year-old brother of Robert, junior pilot class champion, and Dudley Hill, winner in the novice division.

Everett Meeks, of 2606 Myrtle avenue northeast, who was defeated by Robert Wiehle in the ace division by 1 point last fall, is expected to be the chief contender for honors in this group.

The tournament will be directed by John Williams, Powel Junior High School teacher, who is supervisor of the league. Herman Riley, Albert Clark, Frank Carr, Bernard McCarty and Joe Mitchell, of the Department of Playgrounds, will judge the flights.

Two Slightly Hurt At Home-Coming

The rousing home-coming given President Roosevelt yesterday indirectly caused slight injuries to two persons.

Mrs. Richard Dunn, 35, Kennedy-Warren Apartments, walked into Emergency Hospital and said she had been struck on the head by a falling sidewalk flagpole in the 1400 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Michael J. Estep, colored, 32, of 2215 Georgia avenue northwest, was running to make street car connections shortly before the parade and stumbled over a guy wire used to hold back crowds at Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations to the scalp, injuries to the chest and an injured thumb.

Police Trail Crater Or 'Double' in West

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 6 (AP).—Following receipt of reports from Ramona, 35 miles northeast of here, deputy sheriffs said today they were certain that somewhere in San Diego County there is a tall, handsome, middle-aged man who is either Joseph Force Crater, 47, missing New York Supreme Court Justice, or his double.

Wednesday night the man was seen in Pine Valley, 50 miles east of here, by Deputy Sheriff Chester Gracie, who was investigating a report that a miner, Ben Record, had hinted in letters to New York police that he knew something of Crater's whereabouts.

A tall, handsome man, said to be interested in a mine with Record, took to the brush when he overheard Record talking with Gracie, it was reported.

Late yesterday Judge James F. Kelly and Police Chief Claude C. Williams, of Ramona, visited the sheriff's office and said that the man resembling Crater has been working on a road gang near Guyamaca Mountain.

WPA Protest

Petitions protesting against the rumored reorganization of the WPA and urging the Administration to retain its entire staff are to be circulated among WPA employes by the WPA Union, probably starting Monday.

With the petitions under way the unionists plan to send a questionnaire to Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, asking whether or not mass dismissals of WPA employes are contemplated and, if so, what are the details. Hopkins will be invited to reply either by returning the questionnaire or by addressing a mass meeting of WPA employes to be called soon.

Dismissal rumors continue to grow ever more persistent. "Deadline dates" such as December 15 and January 1 are bandied about while the number of dismissals predicted ranges from 5,000 to 20,000. Fuel for these rumors has come not only from the recent reclassification of the project control division and the dismissals in the social research division but from the fact that schedules have been sent out to most project administrators asking how long they would require to finish up their projects.

All these rumors were branded "greatly exaggerated" yesterday by Assistant Administrator Corrington Gill. Gill said that save for the social research division firings no other dismissals have been ordered as yet, and that the whole question of WPA reorganization is pretty much up in the air "as it has been for more than three years."

Dismissals are likely to come through two ways, a general tightening up of the administration, or a curtailment of the program. At present, Gill said, division heads have been instructed to examine their set-ups to determine where savings can be made. "Excess" employes in these units are likely to be let out, he added.

On the broader question of a general curtailment of the program, with a consequent slash of personnel, Gill declared, nothing has been done so far. He indicated, however, that once the tightening up investigations was completed the personnel situation would be resurveyed preliminary to the drawing up of plans anticipating possible curtailment of the program.

Gill's stand would indicate WPA administrators expect either an economy drive or a general curtailment of the program, or both, but aren't certain yet just which it will be.

From the many small American flags we saw lying on desks or stuck up in flower vases and file cabinets in Government offices yesterday flag sellers at the parade must have done a brisk business.

Early Man

If you've ever wondered what early man was like tune in on tomorrow's broadcast of the U. S. Office of Education and Smithsonian Institution, and listen to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, who knows more about skulls and bones than any man alive.

At 75 this bushy-haired scientist still has the physical hardihood to spend his summers digging for skeleton remains in the Aleutian Islands and his handshake is as firm as an athlete's. Whenever a controversy about skeletal bones arises invariably Hrdlicka is called upon to settle the dispute. The titles alone of all his anthropological writings would require 12 single-spaced typewritten pages to be listed.

Dr. Hrdlicka's pet pride is his collection of skulls—16,000 in all, unmatched throughout the world. The first skull in the collection was brought back by Lewis and Clark after their famous expedition. The last added was the largest human skull on record, unearthed this summer by Hrdlicka.

To Dr. Hrdlicka, each skull is like a masterful painting, rich in its message of the habits of primitive man, his diseases and passions, battles and customs. Often, as some men take up a favorite book, Dr. Hrdlicka will pick up a skull and reread its message. His only "peeve" as far as his skull and bones collection is concerned is that the National Museum is so crowded that the skeletal remains are in danger of fire, and cannot be exhibited to their best advantage to the public.

Our nomination for Lady Bountiful is Mrs. Agnes Chase, who has offered to loan sickroom supplies to any fellow-employe in the Department of Agriculture.

Ban Is Sought On Old Buses By Civic Group

Burroughs Group Seeks Uniform Fare System for District.

The Burroughs Citizens Association, at its first meeting of the year, last night, resolved to send a written demand for abolition of out-of-date buses now operating on the Rhode Island avenue route to the Capital Traction Co. and for the substitution of new ones equipped with proper ventilation. The association met in the Burroughs School.

The resolution was adopted after Robert Dougan, executive assistant of the company, had heard a number of complaints which included disparity of fares on the several bus and car lines operating in the District, and the age of a large number of the street cars and buses now in use. Dougan attended the meeting for the purpose of answering complaints which had been made by the association to the company in correcting the conditions.

David Babp, Burroughs delegate to the District Federation of Citizens' Associations, complained particularly of the company's charge of $1.25 for weekly passes on some lines, and $1 on others.

The association also adopted a resolution drawn up by Babp to be sent to the District Federation urging that firemen be placed on the eight-hour-day basis by means of the three-platoon system now used by the police. Firemen are now required to work from 12 to 16 hours a day, Mr. Babp said.

Citing the old-type chemical apparatus now in use by Fire Station 17, at Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast, the association resolved to send a request for a modern booster pump for the hose wagon to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Lawton B. Mellichampe, organizer of Scota (skippers' club of the air), described the need for a municipal water playground, including a sailing base, to be built in the vicinity of the War College. It was decided to bring the proposition to the attention of the National Capital Parks Commission.

Patricia, 7, Sticks Neck Out; Janitor Frees It for Her

Curiosity is a woman's prerogative—even at the age of 7.

Patricia Galvin, second-grade pupil of the Henry School, Seventh and P streets northwest, was curious, and the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence.

At the noon lunch hour she stuck her head between two fence posts in the school yard to observe at first hand what went on in the forbidden territory outside. She took a nice long look—was satisfied all was well with the world outside and decided to return to play.

Patricia, however, was stuck—literally—she couldn't get her head back in the yard. She was caught. Frantically she called for help. Children screamed. The janitor came, armed with a large wrench. Meanwhile someone called the fire rescue squad.

When they arrived, Patricia was playing about unperturbed. The janitor had freed her.

Patricia lives at 909 M street northwest.

Policeman Shot Bandit in Cafe, Bullet Reveals

Lieut. John Fowler, police ballistics expert, yesterday identified a bullet taken from the chest of Freeland E. Bragg, 28, of the 1100 block of N street northwest, in a Baltimore hospital Thursday as one fired from the gun of Private J. A. Dellenger, of the Third Precinct Police Station.

Bragg was shot shortly after midnight Tuesday, when he and two companions robbed a restaurant in the 1700 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest, as the patrons were listening to the election returns. Dellenger was eating in the rear of the cafe at the time of the holdup.

As Bragg herded 20-odd patrons into the rear, his companion carried off the cash register, which contained $100.

Dellenger ordered him to halt, and fired when he failed to stop. His bullet struck Bragg, who staggered into a waiting automobile.

Bragg entered Mercy Hospital in Baltimore Thursday for treatment of a gunshot wound. He left, however, before physicians had had a chance to examine him.

Rich Shamed By Poor, Says Chest Leader

Jennings Asserts Moderate Income Classes' Gifts Are Praiseworthy.

Declaring "the giving of the poor people should shame the wealthy," Coleman Jennings, general chairman of the Community Chest campaign, told the special assignment unit yesterday they should have no hesitancy in asking wealthy people to bear their share of Washington's welfare load.

He spoke at the report meeting in the Willard Hotel, and was introduced by Joseph P. Tumulty, chairman of the special assignment unit.

Jennings cited statements regarding wealthy people who were withholding their gifts because of alleged economic conditions. He declared most people depending on business or investments for income are better off today than they were a few years ago and consequently better able to give.

The campaign chairman reiterated his statement that "the Community Chest is not taking care of any relief or welfare situation being handled by the Government."

Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong and Mrs. Laura Curtis were guests of honor and in addition the chairman of the various Chest units were seated at the head table. Mrs. Strong, who has done so much for welfare in Washington was given an ovation when she was introduced.

Institution Heads Divided on Affects of Saloons and Stores in Zone.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board decided yesterday to recommend no specific requirement relating to the issuance of liquor permits in the immediate vicinity of hospitals, but to act according to the facts in each case.

This decision was reached after a conference with a dozen private and public hospital spokesmen called by the board as a result of the controversy which developed over the award of a Class A permit over the objections of officers at Walter Reed Hospital, but with the approval of Harry H. Woodring, acting Secretary of War.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the board, said that because no unanimity of opinion was expressed by the hospital representatives with regard to a specific policy it was decided to "exercise the utmost discretion" in every case involving a hospital, but to propose no restriction as to distances.

Protest Is Registered.

Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, chief of finance of the United States Soldiers' Home, complained about the gathering of undesirable persons at barrooms near the entrance of the home, especially on pension days. He declined to recommend any removal of the places, however, because his predecessor had approved the location.

Gen. Coleman said he also agreed with his predecessor in opposing establishment of any liquor stores within two blocks of the Soldiers' Home.

Capt. G. C. Thomas, of Naval Hospital, said that is observation had been that patients bought liquor at downtown stores as often as they did from neighborhood licensees.

Evan H. Tucker, vice president of Casualty Hospital, said his hospital had experienced no trouble with neighborhood liquor stores, but suggested that they be kept at least four blocks away from hospitals.

4-Block Zone Urged.

Col. P. M. Ashburn, of Columbia Hospital, expressed the view that special consideration should be given by the board to Government institutions such as Walter Reed Hospital, while a spokesman for Mount Alto Veterans' Hospital voiced a similar opinion.

Dr. Edgard A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, urged the board to bar liquor licensees within four blocks or 1,200 to 1,500 feet of hospitals.

Dr. Lewis H. Taylor, of Sibley Hospital, suggested that special treatment be given Government institutions, although he said that his hospital had suffered no trouble from liquor vendors.

Dr. Lawrence Jackson, of Freedman's Hospital, said he had had no particular trouble from adjacent liquor stores.

"Patented Turkey" Served at Dinner

'Test-Tube' Diners Eat Heartily Of Novel Foods, All Patented

Concoction Known as 'Hair Tonic' Proves Delightful Cocktail, and Turkey Killed Year Ago Wins Favor With Flavor.

Through the courtesy of the copyright owners, dinner—a strange conglomeration of ancient, processed viands—was served a group of human "test tubes" at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

It was the world's first "patented" dinner and members of the executive committee for the Centennial Celebration of the founding of the United States Patent Office, ate the novel foods, each of which was duly patented, without so much as a single stomach ache.

The dinner was an exact duplicate of the one which will climax the 1-day centennial celebration of the American Patent System on November 23.

Just what comprised the menu no one knew exactly, but they ate and drank boldly. A few of the invited guests showed signs of a greenish pallor when, after drinking a cocktail, they were told it was patented as "hair tonic." But another dash of tonic and they didn't seem to care.

When the turkey was served the diners were informed it had been killed a year ago. It looked delicious, however, and the "test tubes" agreed that the patented process used for preserving the fowl had kept intact the flavor of freshly killed turkey.

The dessert was composed of a strawberry sundae made from berries that had been patented by a process almost as quickly as they could be picked from the fields. This freezing process, it was claimed, kept the fresh flavor in berries which were served months later.

At the conclusion of the dinner it was agreed to patent the entire menu, including the cocktails—an inventor in California worked out that recipe some decades before the country heard of prohibition. He soaked berries in alcohol and it might have been a good hair tonic if people had not started drinking it.

More than 1,000 university and industrial research scientists, inventors, patent attorneys and industrial leaders will be guests at the dinner November 23. Preceding the dinner will be talks by leading scientific and industrial leaders on what the future inventions of the world hold in store.

The "test tubes" who consumed last night's dinner were Commissioner of Patents Conway P. Coe; Thomas Midgeley, jr., chairman of the executive committee of the centennial celebration; E. Willard Jensen, Watson Davis, Alden Emery, Jack Evans, Robert Potter, Edward T. Gibson, president of Frosted Foods, Inc., and Lewis Waters, vice president of General Foods, Inc..

Fiscal Survey To Hear 'Why' Of Costs Today

District Heads to Explain Expenses to Committee at Public Hearing.

District department heads today will offer their explanation why Washington has such an expensive government in an all-day public hearing by the President's fiscal relations committee in the Commercial National Bank Building.

At the same time they will call attention to the estimated $12,000,000 annual cost of furnishing the Federal Government with municipal services and benefits. These figures were submitted to the committee several weeks ago.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan will head the District delegation, and the Commissioners will not attend, as they are scheduled to be heard by the committee two weeks from today.

Maj. Donovan is expected to present a mass of figures, together with comparisons of municipal costs with cities of like size to Washington, in effort to show the reasons for the unusual cost of operating the District Government.

Among other things he will point out that the District bears many costs that are ordinarily borne in the States by county and State governments. The $3,000,000 payment to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, for example, is a cost usually borne by the State, while the administrative expense of collecting taxes is a county burden outside of Washington.

After presenting a general defense of the District's budget Auditor Donovan will call upon each department head to explain his departmental costs in relation to those of other comparative cities.

The proceedings of the first two hours, beginning at 10 a. m., will be broadcast by Station WMAL.

D. C. Driver Is Acquitted In Maryland

Is Found Not Guilty on Charge After Crash of Two Autos.

Case First Tried Before Justice of the Peace Since '27 Act.

For the first time since the Prince Georges County Police Court was set up by act of the Legislature in 1927, a justice of the peace last night tried a traffic case involving a motor vehicle violation on a Maryland State highway.

The justice of the peace was Robert E. Ennis, of Capitol Heights. He found J. E. Ramsey, Washington motorist, not guilty on a charge of reckless driving growing out of a two-car collision on September 20.

Released the night of the accident by Capitol Heights town policemen, Ramsey was arrested yesterday on a warrant sworn to Sergt. William Wells, of the town constabulary. He was brought before the justice of the peace on complaint of Phillip Brainin, of Capitol Heights, whose car was damaged in the accident.

Judge Ennis said he acquitted Ramsey because of lack of evidence.

He consented to try the case, Judge Ennis said, on the basis of an opinion expressed by Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor in a recent letter from him. In this letter the attorney general said justices of the peace were constitutionality empowered to try traffic cases, despite the act of the Legislature which vests this power solely in the so-called police magistrate, George B. Merrick.

Unconstitutionality of the present police court system in Prince Georges County has been charged in several suits filed recently by Attorney Robert W. McCullough, of Cheverly, Md., and now pending in the circuit court.

No eyes more changed by cameras than Elisa Landi's; intriguingly sophisticated on-screen, they are childishly innocent off. Now that Rudy Vallee has smacked over another drunk, maybe he will want to play Jimmy Cagney roles. Jeanette MacDonald is a telephonatic; 30 to 90-minute chats by wire are common in her life . . .

Dick Powell tells this amusing anecdote on himself: On his last visit to his home state (Arkansas) he was motoring through the countryside, wearing spats. His car ran out of gas and he persuaded a colored boy in a dilapidated wagon to drive him to the nearest filling station. On the return trip, the colored boy asked Powell where he had come from. "Hollywood," Dick answered.

The darky grinned broadly, "At's jes what I tole the gas station man," he exclaimed, "the minute I seed dem shoes and uppers you is wearin!"

Jackie Coogan says he has never seen "The Kid." Oldtime fans will remember that this was the picture, produced in 1920 by Charlie Chaplin, which boosted Jackie to child-stardom. Afterward, Coogan earned more than any other movie prodigy, including Shirley Temple.

As a rule, when Groucho Marx blows his lines on a set he breaks out a wisecrack. Some of his funniest would make fine screen fodder. Yesterday he and Chico were sharing a scene, and Chico spoke the line, "My foot's asleep!" Groucho hesitated, and looked toward the dialogue director for help. Chico repeated, "My foot's asleep!"

"It must be the story we're making," Groucho grouched.

Even Blase Critics Get Genuine Thrill In 'Light Brigade' Film Opening Here

Charge of 'Gallant 600' Is Thundering Example of Cinema's Power.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE." Warner Brothers' picturization of a story by Michel Jacoby, adapted to the screen by Mr. Jacoby and Rowland Leigh, cofeaturing Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland, with Patrick Knowles, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, David Niven, C. Henry Gordon, G. P. Huntley, jr., Robert Barrat, Spring Byington, E. E. Clive, J. Carroll Naish, Walter Holbrook and Charles Sedgwick. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, November 3.

This may be set down at once as one of the greatest thrill pictures of all time.

BELL.

While there is an initial vein of romance put under way by the rivalry of two brothers for the hand of the same girl, "The Charge of the Light Brigade" soon resolves itself into a politico-martial subject rather than one of simple and stereotyped love affairs among rival officers in the same army.

The movement of events that initiates the first half of the film's horrendous developments points directly to the massacre at Chukoti, where Surat Khan, the wily ruler of Suristan, wreaks vengeance upon the British crown for the abrogation of the agreement whereby the Surat theretofore had received a handsome endowment annually from the English government.

This massacre of women and children, which is pictured with startling realism, is made the basis of the further developments that lead to the famous charge of the 600 at Balaklava, after the Surat Khan has allied himself with the Russian interests, at bay at Sebastopol.

Orders are Heroically Faked.

To bring the charge about—and the film makes no more claim to absolute historical accuracy than did the stage play of "St. Helena" or Samuel Hopkins Adams' film version of "The Gorgeous Hussy"—a falsification of orders is necessary. The result of this military insubordination is such as to justify the betrayal of discipline completely. There never has been such a scene on the screen as the charge of the cavalry force from which the picture derives its name.

In a production of this kind, individual performances are completely subordinated to the sweeping magnificence of the picture's spectacular climax. When the heroic horsemen thunder past the first and secondary batteries of the defending Russian forces in the Crimea, there is spread before the astounded vision of the audience the most sublime demonstration of human courage that the annals of history record.

Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Patrick Knowles, Henry Stephenson, Spring Byington and the other members of the cast, of course, are to be accoladed for superlative performances, but the film still is not without its faults.

There is, for example, too much bugle-blowing, too much of the fantastic abracadrabra of cinematic warfare to make the preliminary developments of the plot wholly convincing. As a matter of fact, they must remain in memory as sheerest "hokum," but the fact nevertheless remains that when "The Charge of the Light Brigade" finally gets down to the basic business of its sublimated genesis, it is a superb piece of work.

Stage Bill Is Unique.

The stage bill at the Earle this week departs somewhat radically from the usual formula. With Ben Yost's 12 male Singing Collegiates combined with Bill Powers' 24 feminine dancers there is little that needs to be added, and little is.

The vocal interludes of the male chorus are stirring medleys of favorite numbers and the dancing of the line girls is in the best tradition, save for the slightly monotonous insistence that Ravel's "Bolero" must be strung out over an interminable length of time that is not especially well utilized from a Terpsichorean point of view.

Solo dances are contributed to the stage diversion by Charles Baron and Joan Blair, who execute several intricate routines with grace and charm.

At the performance reviewed yesterday, Audrey Sieber, the Earle's trig mistress of ceremonies, did not appear and one wondered where she might have been.

The Paramount News and orchestral contributions, under the baton of Freddie Clark, round out a bill that may safely be guaranteed to salvage anyone on the lively side of ennui. If you can sleep during that charge of the Light Brigade, you best had see your doctor!

"THE MAGNIFICENT BRUTE." Universal picturization of a story by Owen Francis, starring Victor McLaglen, supported by Jean Dixon, Binnie Barnes, William Hall, Henry Armetta, Ann Preston, Edward Norris and Billie Burrud. Directed by John Blystone. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

This picture might have been a grand piece of folklore about a mighty steel worker akin to the Joe Magarac of steel mill stories. Instead it turns out to be a crude, honest, roughneck story about a crude, honest, roughneck mill worker, bragging, working, eating, fighting, but never quite attaining the majesty in each department to deserve a folk hero's place.

It fumbles by bothering about the little homey things—women keeping house, cooks peeling potatoes, little boys studying lessons, instead of telling its story on a big scale as broad as the character Victor McLaglen limns and, as some of the scenes are played.

Yet it has a generous quota of hearty laughs and a pretty constant interest. Men will like it.

It tells of the feud between Bill Morgan, top man in the Aurora mill, and "Big" Andrews, who comes to town, and takes that honor and his girl away from Bill.

Victor McLaglen, whose reward for proving that he is a fine actor was a medal and a row of excellent later roles, does excellently here as "Big" and for the last third of the picture, from the moment of his defeat in the wrestling ring, plays beautifully.

Jean Dixon is fine in a part rather different from her usual flip ones and Billie Burrud, a delight as her hero-worshiping son. William Hall as Bill, is even bigger than "Big." Binnie Barnes is properly cheap as Bill's girl, and Henry Armetta, Edward Norris and Zeni Valori, who merely says "yes" and "no," help.

The picture is probably one of the best of its kind.

"The March of Time" is unusually timely this issue, taking you through the White House, upstairs and down, and back through the Roosevelt term to another election. It also features a fascinating and heartening glimpse of America's progressive education system.

Subsidiaries include a colored cartoon, "Birds in Love," and a football sportorial, entitled "Goals for Gold and Glory."

Metropolitan

"A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM." Warner Brothers picturization of the fantasy by William Shakespeare, adapted to the screen by Charles Kenyon and Mary C. McCall, jr., featuring James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Ian Hunter, Olivia de Havilland, Veree Teasdale, Hugh Herbert, Ross Alexander, Frank McHugh, Anita Louise, Grant Mitchell, Mickey Rooney, Jean Muir and others. Music by Felix Mendelssohn, arranged by Dr. Erich Wolfgang Korngold. Directed by Max Reinhardt and William Dieterle. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

More than three centuries have passed since it was first produced in England and in the intervening years countless productions of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" have found their way to the speaking stage and, while, probably, the majority of them were notable, there was a certain something lacking.

In Max Reinhardt's production of this glorious fantasy for the Freres Warner, that hiatus in production has been filled, with the result that the cinematized "Dream" so expands upon the stage version that on the screen the gossamer imaginings of the playright burst into full flower of artistic and tangible achievement.

Employing virtually the entire acting personnel of the Warner Brothers-First National studios, with each actor, for the most part, in that particular role for which he is best suited, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" presents not only a distinguished company, but offers each, as well, in an interpretation as fine as anything he has done.

Of the witchery and majesty of Dr. Rheinhardt's direction, or of the exquisite music of Felix Mendelssohn, arranged and played under the direction of Dr. Erich Wolfgang Korngold, or of the ethereal loveliness of the ballets, directed by Nijinska, nothing need be added now.

In short, this production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is superbly done and has already taken its just position among the truly great pictures, sound or silent, of all time.

The program is rounded out by releases of the Paramount and Universal News reels.

Columbia

"THE DEVIL IS A SISSY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Rowland Brown, adapted to the screen by John Lee Mahin and Richard Schayer; starring Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper, and Mickey Rooney, supported by Ian Hunter, Peggy Conklin, Katherine Alexander, Dorothy Peterson, Gene Lockhart and Jonathan Hale. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

A story full of heart-appeal, whose theme and development are not unlike those of Sidney Kingsley's "Dead End," played by three of the screen's most talented juveniles, supported by an adult cast of competent players, and the whole directed by W. S. Van Dyke, "The Devil Is a Sissy" returns to F street to add further distinction to the rapidly modernizing Loew's Columbia Theater.

Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney are the three youngsters whose trials and tribulations from the basic framework of the narrative. To the individual and collective work of this youthful trio, add that of Ian Hunter, as Master Freddie's dad; Peggy Conklin, known on the speaking stage and making her screen debut here as Aunt Rose; Jonathan Hale, as the judge, and one has commendable drama, whcih, while immendable drama, which, while inclining at times to the saccharine and the hokumish, is nevertheless,

The program is rounded out with "Batlle Royal," a Terry-Toon of moments; "Crazy Inventions," with gadgets depicted which are just that; and a release of the Metrotone News.

Is Threatened by Extortionists

When she appeared in Philadelphia this week as star of the city's foremost burlesque bill, Ann Corio, the most beautiful exhibitioniste currently appearing before the public, was threatened by kidnaping letters that demanded the payment of huge sums of money to insure her safety. The letters were turned over to the authorities and, so far, Miss Corio has not been molested. She appears at the Gayety here next week, beginning with the Sunday afternoon matinee.

"SKETCHES FROM DICKENS." The Zonta Club of Washington presents Edward F. Payne in a chalk talk on famed Dickens' characters and readings from his works. In the National Press Club Auditorium. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Presenting crayon interpretations of 11 characters out of six of Charles Dickens' novels, Edward F. Payne, cartoonist of the Boston Globe, and one-time president of the Dickens Fellowship of Boston, offered an unusual evening of Dickensiana under the auspices of the Zonta Club of Washington, sponsored as a benefit for its permanent work fund.

From "Pickwick Papers" came portraits of Mr. Pickwick and Sergt. Buzfuz; from "Martin Chuzzlewit," Mrs. Pecksniff and Mrs. Gamp; from "Nicholas Nickleby," Mr. Squeers; from "David Copperfield," Wilkins Micawber, Mrs. Micawber, Uriah Heep and Dora; from "Oliver Twist," Fagin, and from "Christmas Carol," Scrooge.

Easily executed, the while maintaining a running commentary on the life of the author as it bore upon the particular story or character and on the story and persons themselves, Mr. Payne's work brought out all those elements of character commonly thought of in connection with the several people. Particularly outstanding were his Sergt. Buzfuz, Micawber (with slightly Farley-ish lines), and, especially Scrooge.

While drawing Scrooge, Mr. Payne outlined the story to the character's "reformation," then proceeded to redraw the picture to represent the new man, a feat which, though not particularly difficult, was, nevertheless, very effective.

Prior to the introduction of Mr. Payne by Mabel Strider, president of the club, the Bach "Prelude in E Major," as arranged for the piano by Leopold Mannes, was played by Meta Bradley, and Bernadette Crouch, with Marjorie Lowe at the piano, sang "Kathleen Mavourneen." As a prelude to part two of the program Florence Sindell, with Emily G. Dickinson as accompanist, sang "Then You'll Remember Me," from "The Bohemian Girl," and 'Home Sweet Home." While Mr. Payne was drawing David Copperfield's Dora, she rendered "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

The program was enthusiastically received, and the Zonta Club is to be thanked for bringing Mr. Payne to Washington's many Dickens lovers.

Four Stars Add Up to Ace Bill At the Capitol

'Ladies in Love' and Sara Churchill Compile Fine Entertainment.

"LADIES IN LOVE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a play by Ladislaus Bus-Fekete, adapted to the screen by Melville Baker, cofeaturing Loretta Young, Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett and Simone Simon, with Don Ameche, Paul Lukas, Tyrone Power, jr., Alan Mowbray, J. Edward Bromberg and Virginia Field. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Figures tell fibs sometimes, but the fact that there are four "big name" stars in "Ladies in Love," adds up just as it should—meaning that the picture is four times better than it would have been with one star.

There has been a lot of gossip about the tantrums and temperament incident to making a picture with the Mesdames Bennett, Gaynor, Young and that Simone Simon all on one set. If so, let's have more TNT in picture making, for all of the girls have turned in tense and smart performances.

But to the usually too, too madonna-like Loretta Young must go the gold star. As the little adventuress of Budapest, Loretta at last gets her chance to switch from a milk to a champagin diet. She is glamorous, careless, despairing and, altogether, pretty entrancing.

All Get Their Wishes.

The story is of three little working girls of Budapest, all pretty and charming, and al. "on the make." They pool their skimpy funds to get a good-looking apartment. One, Connie, wants a rich husband. Loretta wants a smart hat shop. Janet just wants a home and a husband that she can love. They all get their wishes, somehow, but Connie and Loretta have to take it on the chin. They wind up with the desired rich husband and hat shop, but lose the boy friends that really counted. The story is sophisticated but a bit sweet, for all that, rather in the Viennese manner with the fun seasoned with tears and heartbreak.

Simone Simon, the little rascal, plays a schoolgirl who steals Connie's sweetheart in the innocent manner. That is, the lines are innocent and the role is supposedly innocent, but the little Simon plays it with such malice, slyness and sensuousness that the effect is highly enigmatic. Or can it be that Simone decided to play the schoolgirl in a way to end all schoolgirl roles?

Alan Mowbray stands equal to any of the stars, perhaps even higher. His interpretation of the "Great Sandor," unctuous and highly seasoned, should stand among the best of the year.

Connie Dominates.

Connie Bennett, beautiful as a diamond and hard as nails, is still the dominating Bennett. But she gains immeasurably by being surrounded with other stars, quite as beautiful and more appealing. Janet Gaynor, still lovely, turns in a colorful and charming performance. More work along this line and the Gaynor should start a fresh career.

Paul Lukas, Tyrone Power, jr., and Don Ameche, playing the girls' heart interests, all are good and effective, getting the most out of their parts.

The suave direction of Edward Griffith, a strong suspense maintained to the last minute and a flippant, go-as-yuo please ending all combine nobly to support the efforts of an almost record-breaking cast. "Ladies in Love" is definitely a "must" item for movie-goers.

And on the Stage.

Headliner Sara Churchil, whom we have seen so much in the headlines lately, registered a personality hit with the audience. Her dancing is charming, although hardly of star, professional caliber. Vic Oliver, teamed in newspaper headlines with Miss Churchill, proves to be a great deal better looking than his pictures and with an apt manner of delivering patter that finally built up his act to a successful climax. But Mr. Oliver's manner is no end better than his material, which seems to have been compiled rather than originated.

The Sylvia Manon dancing act is one of the best, both in setting and performance, that has appeared at the Capitol. The little Manon is incredibly graceful and agile and the "porcelain setting" of the act is surprising. Prof. Lamberti belabored the xylophone to achieve the top applause success of the show and the four Robeys went in for a really entertaining combination of juggling and acrobatics.

Phil Lampkin and his lads offer a Friml overture.

The newsreel gave the crowd opportunity to extend a rousing greeting to the President, and a cartoon comedy about a kangaroo boxing match gives the concluding punch to the show.

The Black Automatic

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Harla slipped her trigger safety on red. "We'd better be getting ready for trouble. He'll put that Indian to tracking us."

"If he puts that Indian anywhere, it'll be on the fire to boil," Noel answered, as Flood left the cabin and hurried back the path.

"If you're going to run a burst and drive them into that cabin," Harla bade, "you'd better be doing it."

"Steady a minute. Watch down there. We might get a break out of this."

As Flood neared the campfire the men looked up at him, stopped eating an glanced sidelong at one another, aware that something catastrophic had happened. The unsuspecting Yellowknife had just set his rifle against a tree, and his back was turned; and upon him, without word or warning, Flood sprang like a tiger. With a grab he tore the Indian's knife and belt ax away, flung them into the fire, and staggered the Indian with a smashing blow to the face. Grappling the Yellowfinife by the throat, he rode him to the ground and pinioned him there.

All the other men, all save d'Orleans, were paralyzed by the violence of Flood's outburst, and they could only stare at the two. But d'Orleans, dropping his plate and fork, leaped up and rushed in.

"Hey! w'at de hell?" he cried, grabbing Flood by the shoulders. "Flood! Stop dat! You gone crazy. You don't keel dis feller wit'out anyhow saying w'y so."

While Flood fought to tear free, the Yellowknife scrambled to his feet and leaped for his rifle. Before anyone could stop him or even move, he had seized the weapon and whipped it up and aimed it at Flood. He, too, had a fury within him, the blood-fury of an Indian disgraced. And there was no one to halt him from killing Flood. He was yards from those other men, yards from young d'Orleans.

Helpless, stunned, Noel stared down at the spectacle in cold fright. In that tense drama yonder he saw a tragic end to all his hopes of taking Raphael Flood alive. The scene, as it hung poised for an instant, was burned into his brain: the Indian with the rifle against his cheek; Flood fumbling for his pocket gun.

Cr-aa-ck—beside Noel, a sharp-speaking rifle. Harla's. She had been holding her gun at alert, watching over the sights; and she beat the Yellowknife to the trigger squeeze. Carelessly, hardly appearing to take aim at all, she shot once.

Her once was enough. Her bullet caught the Yellowknife hard in the left shoulder and spun him around. The gun flew from his hands. He staggered and sank to his knees.

In profound gratitude Noel turned to Harla and laid his hand on her arm. He wanted to thank her for pulling his hunt back from sure doom, but he could find no words to say it. He wanted to ask forgiveness for believing that she might break her promise to him. With a splendid loyalty to the spirit of that promise, she had gone far beyond the letter of her pledge. When every one else was powerless, she had actually saved Flood from death.

As he looked at her, he saw tears spring to her eyes at sight of the reeling and pain-convulsed Yellowknife.

"Stop it!" he ordered her, dismayed at her giving way like that. "You only winged him. He can be patched up. Sympathy for anybody in that outfit is sympathy wasted."

The startling bark of Harla's rifle, from the silence of the hillside, yanked the attention of the men from the quarrel between Flood and Stahmix. All of them jumped up and stared blankly at the timbered slope, bewildered by that mystery shot.

Again young d'Orleans was the first to act.

"You, dere!" he shouted. "Who de hell? Speak op feller!"

Noel tilted the Vickers downward. Harla's shot had touched off the fuse to this struggle, and that fuse could not be pinched now. His cue was to drive all the terror he could into those men while they were so befuddled. Panicky and confused, they might take his terms.

Bracing himself to steady the big gun, he aimed carefully—into the trees above the men; and pulled back on the sheathed trigger.

The sudden burst of staccato fire leaping from the hillside; the storm of bullets splattering through the pines; the bellowing roar that filled the narrow valley-like long rolling thunder—it created all the pandemonium he had counted on, and more. The shag-haired prospector stumbled backwards and fell over, as though knocked down by a tangible blow. Young d'Orleans sprang for shelter of a boulder. In terror of those screaming bullets Flood whirled and scurried for the cabin and dived into it like a panicky rabbit; and after him streamed the other men, yelling, piling up at the doorway, fighting and pushing to get inside.

Noel cut his burst short, before the last man was within he would peed every inch of them.

In half a minute, as the last faint echoes of the blast died away, he called down:

"Paul d'Orleans! D'you hear me?"

"Ou' ou'," the young metis answered, keeping behind his rock. "Wat you wan'?"

"I want to talk to you. Come up here."

Young d'Orleans snorted scornfully. "You t'ink I'm damnfool babee, hein? I don't stan' op and let you pot me."

"I could have potted you, and all the rest of you, if I had wanted to. The point is, I don't want to. Are you yellow, d'Orleans? Afraid to palaver a person, d'Orleans?"

At the taunt the young metis bobbed up like a jack-in-the-box. "Me yaller?" He vaulted up on the rock, in bold challenging view. "You eat dat 'yaller,' you."

"All right, I'll eat it. But come on up here. You can come and go and you won't be touched. That's a promise."

Young d'Orleans turned toward the cabin. "Hey, Flood, w'at you say? You wan' me go op dere?"

Noel did not catch Flood's answer, but it was evidently yes, for d'Orleans jumped off the rock and walked down the foot-trail and turned up slope toward the pillbox. As he came within a dozen steps Noel ordered him:

"That's close enough. Stay where you are."

"Well, I'm here. W'at you wan'?" d'Orleans demanded.

"I want Flood, Noel told him. "I don't want you or those others, but I do want Flood; and I'll get him if I have to kill you and that whole outfit. If you and those other men will turn Flood over to me, you can all get out of this country and I'll never molest you. That's more decency than you rate, you killers; but I'll give it to you."

Young d'Orleans scowled. "You t'ink we knife Flood in de back lak dat? And give op dat seex-seven million dollar placer down dere jus' 'cause you say so? Splaa! We'll give you wan bellyful of fight 'fore we do dat."

"You can't fight. You're sewed up. We've got you trapped in that cabin; you can't get out, we're covering that door and window with a machine gun. Besides that, your two planes down there are out of commission. As for that mine, you haven't a chance in a million to keep it. I told the Mounted about it and they're coming in here——"

"Splaa! You din' tell de Mounted nut'ing 'bout dat placer. You jus' wan' dose seex-seven million dollar for yourself. You talk beeg 'cause you're 'fraid of a fight. You got nobody wit' you but dat Harla girl. I see your tracks."

"We won't argue. Go back down and tell those others what I've told you. Talk it over and make up your minds. I'll give you 15 minutes to hand Flood over. If you don't I'll make kindling wood of that cabin and kill every man of you."

"Okay. I tell 'em."

Contract Bridge

When to Draw Trumps.

Most players do not know when to draw trumps. Some fall into the error of drawing them sometimes and leaving them outstanding at other times—without good reason. The result is that they may do the wrong thing 90 per cent of the time!

Far better, if you are not sure, is to draw trumps always. Then at least you will be right more than half time. Best of all is to know why you draw trumps. Take today's hand:

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q 10 7 5 ♡ J 10 4 ◇ A K Q 7 4 ♣ 10
♠ A 8 ♡ K 7 5 3 2 ◇ 8 ♣ J 7 5 3 2	North West East South	♠ 9 6 3 ♡ 8 ◇ J 10 6 3 ♣ K Q 8 6 4
	♠ K J 4 2 ♡ A Q 9 6 ◇ 9 5 2 ♣ A 9

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding:

West opened the singleton diamond, dummy winning with the Queen. South resisted the impulse to take a heart finesse at once. Instead he looked at the trumps and asked himself "What is the function of each trump—both in dummy and in my own hand?"

The answer was not difficult to find. One of dummy's trumps would be needed at some time to trump a club. The others sereved no useful purpose. No trumps in his own hand was needed at all.

Since they were not needed, South decided to take no risks. The opponents had trumps with which it was possible for them to do damage. By drawing them, South could lose nothing and might achieve safety.

By this line of play declarer lost only the Ace of spades and the King of hearts. Had he taken a heart finesse at once, the opponents would have cross-ruffed the red suits— defeating the contract.

Note how easy it is, in most cases, to determine whether or not your trumps are needed for some special purpose. And the general rule for drawing trumps is: "Draw out all your idle trumps."

60,000 to Watch Navy Play Favored Notre Dame Team Today

G. W., Wary, Will Start Regulars

Davis-Elkins, Improving, to Be Outweighed in Clash Here.

Colonial Reserves to Get Chance if Their Side Has Early Lead.

Facing a heavier, but apparently inferior Davis-Elkins team, the George Washington eleven has been drilled and trained just as thoroughly for today's game at Griffith Stadium as for any major opponent this season.

Although rated an overwhelming favorite over the West Virginia aggregation, George Washington will start its regular line-up.

When—or if—the first team piles up a substantial lead, a flock of Colonial substitutes and second-string players who have been wearing out benches all year will be given a chance to display their worth.

Colonials Outweighed.

The reasons for the Colonials' careful preparation for Davis-Elkins are quite apparent. The West Virginians will have an average weight advantage of 10 pounds per man in the line over George Washington. Such bulk may be difficult to penetrate and may require all the offensive tactics that Coach Jim Pixlee has drilled into his charges.

Not only will Davis-Elkins outweigh the Colonials in the line, but the visitors have been rapidly finding themselves after a poor start. Defeated by West Virginia Wesleyan, St. Bonaventure and Mount St. Mary's at the outset of the season, the Senators have rounded into a form that carried them to a scoreless tie with the highly favored Geneva College team. Geneva previously had lost to West Virginia Wesleyan by a single point, dropping a 7 to 6 decision.

As added evidence of increased power, Davis-Elkins topped the Geneva victory by downing another favored foe, Xavier, 13 to 12.

Invaders Practice Here.

The Davis-Elkins team arrived yesterday afternoon and went through a final workout at Griffith Stadium. Those who pull the strings on the visitors insisted that the squad is in the best shape of this season and predicted a close battle.

Winning from Davis-Elkins may mean the difference between the best year the Colonials ever have known—and just another year of George Washington football. Defeated only by Rice, which downed them in Texas last week by a 12 to 6 score, the Colonials have only to whip Davis-Elkins, Catawba and West Virginia University to cap a successful season.

Purdue Is Test For Fordham

40,000 to See Rams Carry Bowl Hopes Today.

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—With Fordham's undefeated record and Rose Bowl hopes at stake, the Rams will meet Purdue at the Polo Grounds tomorrow before a crowd estimated at 40,000.

Beaten only by Minnesota, Purdue, boasting a great attack led by Cecil Isbell and Johnny Drake, is touted as the supreme test for the Fordham defense. For the first time in three weeks, the Boilermakers have their other star back, Fred Stalcup, ready for action.

Purdue's 20-0 victory over Fordham was the only one the Rams suffered last year.

Duquesne Crushes Washington U., 26-0

St. Louis, Nov. 6 (AP).—Duquesne's fast charging line carried a makeshift backfield that was later strengthened with the entrance of triple-threat Boyd Brumbaugh to a 26-0 victory over Washington University of St. Louis before a crowd of 14,000 at Francis Field tonight.

Doctor Doubts Laing, Jockey, Will Recover

By the Associated Press.

The condition of Noel Laing, widely known jockey in Virginia and North Carolina ride and hunt circles, critically ill in a Washington hospital was reported yesterday by his physician as unchanged.

Laing has been a patient in the hospital since October 10. His physician, Dr. Edgar M. McPeak, has expressed doubt over Laing's recovery from a malignant infection.

Four Reasons Why Notre Dame Is Favored to Whip Navy Today

Attracting a throng of Washington fans to the Georgetown Prep Field where it held a final practice yesterday, Notre Dame's squad spent last night in the Capital before proceeding to Baltimore this morning. Carliss, Mundorff Lead the Maryland Attack as Breaks Aid Victors.

Taking advantage of the breaks in the second and third periods, the Maryland Freshmen defeated the Georgetown Freshmen, 21 to 0, at College Park yesterday.

Two speedy backs, Johnny Carliss and Pershing Mundorff, helped the Old Liners roll up ten first downs to Georgetown's 6 and held a wide margin in ground gained.

Carliss scored all three touchdowns and Mundorff booted three perfect placements for the extra points.

Early in the second quarter, Francis Beamer smashed through to block Kava's punt and Paul Whedon recovered for Maryland on the Hill Top 9-yard stripe. A shovel pass from Mundorff to Carliss brought the first score.

Georgetown fumbled on its own 10-yard line at the outset of the final half to pave the way for Maryland's second scoring jaunt. Carliss jogged off right tackle for the touchdown.

Georgetown took the kick-off and drove to the Maryland 37-yard marker, where Carliss intercepted a pass and returned with the pigskin to the Hoya 30-yard line. Charley Bengeochea lateralled to Carliss, who trotted across the line.

Mrs. Jarrett Plans Personal Appeal on Her A.A.U. Status

By the Associated Press.

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, dismissed from the American swimming team en route to the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin, and under suspension from the Amateur Athletic Union, said today she would apply personally for reinstatement before the annual convention of the A. A. U. at Houston, Tex., next month.

"I want with all my heart to remain an amateur," said Mrs. Jarrett, "and I have made up my mind to appear personally before the meeting at Houston next month and make a direct appeal to have my case reopened and reconsidered, putting my case if I can before the convention as a whole."

"They say time heals many things," she aded. "All I can say now is that I am very hopeful and rather optimistic."

West Va. Clash Today Makes or Breaks G. U.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fairmont, W. Va., Nov. 6.—Its undefeated record hanging in the balance, a determined but lightly regarded Georgetown University eleven pitched its camp on the banks of the Monongahela River tonight, awaiting tomorrow's game with West Virginia which will change the entire complexion of the Hoyas' 1936 campaign.

Georgetown will emerge from tomorrow's game either with renewed confidence in itself or a sadly disillusioned band of football players. The odds were 7-5 on West Virginia tonight with Mountaineer supporters ready to bet at the sight of a billfold.

The reason for the confidence apparently was caused by the return of Halfback Glenn Carder, and Sam Audia, 190-pound fullback, who have been on the injured list two weeks. Homer Cropp, 198-pound tackle who was injured in the Western Maryland game last week, also will appear in the starting lineup, bringing the team to full strength.

Jack Fleming Missing.

Georgetown, on the other hand, will be without the services of Jack Fleming, best punter and one of the most valuable men on the squad. With his expert toe available tomorrow the Hoyas' chances would be considerably better than reckoned tonight, although Coach Jack Hagerty is confident that Bill Duff, who must shoulder the kicking burden, will come through with a sparkling performance. Hagerty believes Duff is at his best in close quarters, and this theory will be given a thorough test in the crucible of tomorrow's game.

The Hoyas will start a revamped but powerful team, featuring four changes in the line-up.

Cardinals-Browns Link Under Probe

Chicago, Nov. 6 (U.P.).—Repeated rumors that the St. Louis Cardinals are closely identified with the syndicate which will purchase the St. Louis Browns from the Phil Ball Estate will be investigated at a meeting of American League club owners in Chicago next Thursday.

"I do not wish to interfere in the negotiations for the sale of the Browns," said Will Harridge, president of the American League, "but I will say that no deal will be approved until we know who the new owners are and they are approved by the rest of the league. I can safely say, too, that any official of the Cardinals who may figure in the purchase of the Browns must sever his National League relations before he will be acceptable to the American League.

2 Maryland U. Stars to Face Richmond

Guckeyson and Meade to Be in Line-up; Boost Old Liners' Stock.

With Bill Guckeyson and Jim Meade back in uniform, the University of Maryland eleven leaves College Park today to meet the University of Richmond in a highly encouraged frame of mind. Both Meade and the dangerous man from Bethesda spent an hour in signal drill yesterday and appeared in fit enough shape to be in the starting line-up.

Maryland will be meeting its third Virginia team, having scored wins over both V. M. I. and Virginia, both of whom rate stronger than the Spiders.

The game will mark the first return to Richmond of Coach Frank Dobson, of the Terps, in a coaching status. Leader of the Richmond grid forces for more than ten years, the Maryland mentor is keen on subjecting the Spiders to the test.

Terps Depend on Stars.

With Guckeyson and Meade in action his chances are excellent, but without either of them the Maryland cause appears considerably less bright. Meade is virtually certain to see plenty of action, but whether Guckeyson will be able to carry his passing and running bur-

Irish Ranked 6-5 Favorite For Game

Best Tickets Gone; About 10,000 Unsold to Go on Sale at Stadium.

Middies Have Won but Two of Ten Contests Between Rivals.

Notre Dame vs. Navy, the game that annually proves the greatest football spectacle in the Washington area, will lure 60,000 fans to the Baltimore Municipal Stadium today.

Here in the Capital, the rambling Irish from South Bend, put the finishing touches on their preparation for the battle with a long practice at the Georgetown Prep School field, where a throng of Washington fans was impressed with the size and appearance of the squad.

Apparently recovered from their 26-0 beating at the hands of Pitt two weeks ago, the Irish have been established as the favorite over the Midshipmen at odds of 6 to 5. The narrowness of the odds is taken as a tribute to the strength of Navy which is recognized despite three consecutive defeats at the hands of Yale, Princeton and Penn.

Choice Tickets Sold.

Choice tickets for the game, in demand since the start of the season, are exhausted. Annapolis authorities report a sell-out of all high-priced seats. Ten thousand tickets, mostly of the $2.20 variety, will go on sale at the stadium at 9 a. m. today.

One half of the regiment of 2,300 Midshipmen will move into Baltimore for the battle, thoroughly drilled in their cheering and spectacular card maneuvers. The remainder of the Midshipmen, who will forego the trip, have planned an excursion to Cambridge, Mass., next Saturday for the Navy-Harvard game.

Today's battle is the tenth annual contest between the Irish and the Middies, the series beginning in 1927 when Notre Dame defeated Navy, 19-6. Last year the Fighting Irish won, 14 to 0. In the nine games played, Navy has won only twice, in 1933 by a score of 7-0, and the following season by 10 to 6.

Navy Lineup Named.

Tom Hamilton, Navy coach, wound up his preparation for the game with a light workout at Annapolis yesterday. Hamilton has been giving special attention to his backfield group and has named Case as his starting quarterback, with Antrim and Ingram as his halfbacks and the dependable Snead Schmidt at fullback.

Coach Elmer Layden made no secret of the Notre Dame lineup at the workout here yesterday, declaring he would start Puplis, Wilke, Wojcihovski and Danbom in the backfield.

The lineups:

Notre Dame.	Position.	Navy.
O'Neill	L.E.	Soucek
Steinkemper	L.T.	Ferrara
Lautar	L.G.	Dubois
Mundee	Center	Miller
Kuharich	R.G.	Morrell

Wildcats Seek Big Ten Crown

Wisconsin Game Today Key to First Honors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Northwestern, leader of the dwindling national parade of undefeated, untied college gridiron arrays, goes after the Big Ten championship tomorrow.

The Wildcats, triumphant over mighty Minnesota a week ago and needing only one more victory to bring Northwestern its first undisputed title in Big Ten football history, will swing on Wisconsin's battered Badgers before 30,000 spectators at Evanston, in quest of that victory. The figures do not offer a hint that Lynn Waldorf's great machine might fail to reach the title goal.

Roosevelt Intramural.

In basketball Section 1177 defeated 1307, 304; Section 2303 defeated 2283, 24-13; Section 2324 defeated 2214, 13-12; Section 1098 lost to 1018 by forfeit. The Roosevelt Seconds will play the Central Jayvees in football at Roosevelt Stadium, Wednesday, at 3:30 p. m.

Cards Slight Choice Over Wesleyan

Bobcats, Conquerors of Duquesne, to Be Tough Opponent.

Foe Is at Full Strength for First Time Since Tilt With Dukes.

Against the same team which tossed Duquesne out of the unbeaten, untied list of the country's leading football powers, Catholic University will send its Cardinals today in Brookland Stadium at 2 p. m.

Needing a victory to keep from extending a losing streak to three straight Saturdays, C. U. rules a slight favorite to turn back the belligerent Bobcats despite the latters' impressive record. A win for the Cardinals would go far toward redeeming its defeats of the past two weeks when it fell victim to Mississippi and Loyola of New Orleans.

Wesleyan, however, seeking another major scalp to hang alongside that of the fallen Dukes, is coming to town primed for big game with full strength available for the first time since the Duquesne conquest. Standing out particularly for the Bobcats is their triple-threat fullback, Leonard Barnum, who was voted a place on the C. U. all-opponents team last year.

Another ace punter for the Bobcats will be making an appearance in Nelson Paterson, who also contributes considerable damage with his running jaunts. Although five of Wesleyan's regulars were laid up on the injury shelf by the costly victory over Duquesne, they will be ready for action today, having been kept out of last week's game with Waynesboro with this express purpose.

Catholic U. received a tough blow on the eve of its first home game in three weeks when Leo Katalinas, tackle, disclosed a cracked rib, which will keep him on the bench throughout. Elwood Clements, other tackle, who was named by Ray Hayes and Bernard, of Mississippi's powerful team, as the toughest tackle they had met all season with the exception of Katalinas, will be available, however. Sam Pagano will replace Katalinas.

In no way is Coach A. J. (Dutch) Bergman looking upon today's battle as a warm-up for his remaining games with North Carolina State and Western Maryland. The mere fact that the Cardinals are slight favorites means little to Coach C. B. Ross, of Wesleyan, who in ten years at the West Virginia school has overturned such teams as Southern Methodist, Kentucky, Georgetown, N. Y. U., Syracuse and, of course, Duquesne.

British Army Officer Wins National Horse Show Challenge Cup on $160 Ex-Plow Horse

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 6.—Maguire, a former plow horse with unknown ancestors, made good among more royally bred rivals today as Army-trained horsemen showed a marked superiority over civilian riders at the National Horse Show in sweeping the first four places in the competition for the Brooks-Bright Foundation Challenge Cup.

Ridden by Lieut. J. A. Talbot-Ponsonby, of the British army team, Maguire, purchased from an English farm for $160, gave the only perfect performance over the difficult jumps to take the event, which was limited to subjects of King Edward VIII and citizens of the United States.

The victory, acheived over 37 other highly reputed fencers, marked the first triumph of the show for the British and their second in the event. They also won in 1931 on their last appearance in New York.

Not content with winning the ruge trophy, the British also finished second when Capt. R. H. Fanshawe, mounted on Blue Dun, outscored Capt. Stuart Bate, of Canada, and Capt. Dan Corry, of the Irish Free State, in a three-way jump-off. Capt. Bate, mounted on Squire, champion jumper last year in Danny Shea's silks, carried off the yellow ribbon, while fourth place and the white ribbon went to Capt. Corry and Red Hugh.

The rivalry for blue ribbons tightened as Frances Dodge, of Rochester, Mich., drew up on even terms with Judy King, of Atlanta, with five victories each and Hubert Silberman, master of the Lelaine Farm, of Glenview, Ill., kept within striking distance, running his total number of triumphs to four.

While Miss King was being shut out, Miss Dodge picked up two more blues with her great string of harness and saddle horses. Society Barrymore, ridden by Wallace Bailey, took the measure of a fine field of three-gaited saddle horses, over 15.2 hands, and the team of Braishfield Debonair and Potentilla, driven by Reed Bridgeford, scored in the class for harness tandems over 14.2 hands.

Miss King had a chance to hold to her lead in the tandem class but her entry of Knight Bachelor and Dunbreck Princess was unable to repeat an earlier triumph over Miss Dodge's high-stepping combination.

Silberman's fourth blue came as the result of Dickey Dhu's second triumph of the exhibition. The 9-year-old brown gelding, ridden by Lloyd Teater, proved to be the best

Soldiers' Fate Scores Lucky Win in Gentleman Riders 'Chase

Stirrup Lost By 50-1 Shot Near End

Bellman, 15 Lengths in Lead, at Last Fence, Beaten.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Nov. 6.—Gentlemen jockeys and hunting horses had their innings today in the annual running of the Master of Fox Hounds Steeplechase. The betting public might have been unfamiliar with the sport of chasing foxes, but it knew a rider and backed Mr. C. R. White and Soldier's Fate, his mount, into favoritism, and this pair came through. However, it was a lucky victory. Bellman, a 50-1 shot, in all probability would have been the winner had not Jockey H. H. Thomas lost one of his stirrups while coming to the last fence with a 15-length lead.

With Thomas struggling to help Bellman, White brought Soldier's Fate up with a rush, and on the flat run to the finish line made up the ground that spelled victory. The winner, owned by Campbell Weir, of Wilmington, Del., had a length advantage over Bellman, owned by J. Fred Adams, jr.

Soldier's Fate paid a $5.90 mutuel and ran the gruelling 3 miles in 6 minutes and 5 seconds, the best time recorded for this race but well over the track record of 6:01 2-5, the property of Faskadale.

A field of 12 began the test and ten of that number finished. Argonaut was first to be erased, losing rider on the eighth fence, while Drill Master bounced off his pilot at the eighteenth fence. The Messrs. Owens and Greene were not injured.

The race was run in two flights with only Soldier's Fate, Bellman and Royal Thomas being in the important group. With Royal Thomas setting the pace, Bellman and Soldier's Fate were always within striking distance during the first two miles. On the last swing of the course, Bellman appeared headed for an easy win. Fencing boldly he was taken to the front, drew out to a long lead and seemed to gallop to the wire when Thomas lost the stirrup.

The Greentree Stable's Bad Dreams, a lukewarm favorite at $7.50 mutuel, won the opening dash for juvenile fillies of the maiden variety. Jockey Johnny Gilbert had little trouble. He kept Bad Dreams on the rail and when the leaders swung out entering the stretch, he took his charge through and the remainder of the race was a formality.

Square Play Wins.

Square Play, ridden by Apprentice Jockey R. Morris, defeated nine other cheap platers over the mile and seventy yards course to pay a $15.40 mutuel. Jim Corn was an energetic second, with Canpra nosing out Moonpenny for third money. Canpra probably was best but got little help from his rider.

Chatmoss tipped repeatedly finally scored in the third race and paid a $7.30 mutuel. The aged Chatterton horse took a nose decision from Count Stone after a trip over the mile and three sixteenths course. Mr. Bun, one that bumped the winner in the stretch, was third in the field of six.

Scrooge, a juvenile son of Haste, ran a smashing race to take the Alibi Purse at a mile and 70 yards. Ridden by Nick Wall, he defeated, among others, Genie Palatine, one of the favored Denemark entry, and Strabo owned by Mrs. C. O. Iselin. Scrooge paid a $14.80 mutuel. Jockey Harry Richards was forced to cancel his mount in tomorrow's Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes when he fell out of Booming Guns' saddle at the far turn. Richards was slightly injured about the neck and shoulders.

Stout Is Suspended.

A fast pace in which four horses battled nose and nose to the stretch aided Jean Bart to come from behind and win the sixth race. The Man-O-War colt paid $17.90 mutuel. Crossbow II was second and Wha Hae third in the field of six competing at six furlongs.

A disqualification marked the seventh race. Duel and Riparian finished noses apart, with the latter being taken out of the money. Riparian fouled Night Bud and Uneasy in the stretch. The foul was so obvious that the stewards took action without any of the jockeys making a protest. Duel paid a $13.40 mutuel.

Jockey J. Stout was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding aboard Riparian in the seventh race, and his case referred to the State Racing Commission.

BAD DREAMS, steadied along on the inside to the stretch turn, came through a gap on the rail to take command, drew clear and was taken in hand approaching the finish. AERO broke alertly, shook off BITINDEPENDENT entering the stretch while going wide and finished willingly. COMPLIMENT came up on the outside to enter contention, but was carried wide at the final turn and closed gamely. BLACKSOD was hard ridden throughout and showed a good effort. BITINDEPENDENT was in close quarters in the early stretch after running forwardly. CONTRITE closed willingly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SQUARE PLAY, $15.40, $6.40, $3.40; JIM CORN, $4.70, $2.90; CANPRA, $2.30.

SQUARE PLAY ran FLYING VIM into defeat to take the lead approaching the far turn, ran with MOON PENNY to the eighth pole and regained command after being headed and held JIM CORN safe at the end. The latter was close to the leaders from the beginning and closed gamely on the outside. CANPRA was poorly handled and closed willingly with the rider of little help. MOON PENNY gained sharply at the far turn, took the lead briefly in mid-stretch and faltered. MISS ADELINE was held safe throughout. RANICILLA saved much ground entering the stretch. FLYING VIM had early speed.

THIRD RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Monkton. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:39. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHATMOSS, $7.30, $4.80, $3.80; COUNT STONE, $6.80, $3.90; MR. BUN, $4.30.

CHATMOSS, excellently handled and a forward factor from the start, was steadied along with COUNT STONE to the stretch and withstood a strong hand ride to hold away over COUNT STONE, despite suffering interference in the stretch from MR. BUN. COUNT STONE saved ground all the way while hard ridden and closed willingly to barely miss. MR. BUN ran wide at the first two turns while under restraint, moved up on the outside to the leaders and swerved in repeatedly through the stretch. TEDDY HASLAM was going gamely at the end. ROWES CRUMP could not keep up. BULWARK, under restraint for a mile, failed to rally under a drive.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $22.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOLDIERS FATE (entry), $5.90, $4.00, $3.60; BELL MAN, $27.10, $13.70; ROYAL THOMAS (entry), $3.60.

SOLDIERS FATE, confidently handled and steadied over the jumps, was forwardly placed throughout, took command of the outside, came to the inside at final fence, came with a rush on the flat to wear down BELL MAN despite losing rein nearing the finish. BELL MAN, close to the pace of ROYAL THOMAS, took command with a bold rush with two fences to go, opened a long lead, but Thomas lost stirrup approaching the final jump and was unable to do mount justice. ROYAL THOMAS set a brisk pace, but was tiring badly at the end. CROSSBARD went evenly, but was never a factor. ARGONAUT was running forwardly when he lost rider at the eighth fence. DRILL MASTER lost rider at the eighteenth fence.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. The Alibi. Purse, $1,000. For 2- and 3-year olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:42. Off at 3:43½. Winner, H. Philipps' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCROOGE, $14.80, $4.70. GENIE PALATINE (entry), $2.60, $2.30; STRABO, $8.70.

SCROOGE, under slight restraint while running closest to the early pace of GENIE PALATINE, took command leaving the back stretch and saved ground to hold sway to the finish. GENIE PALATINE continued gamely after being displaced. STRABO went to the leaders with a bold rush along the back stretch and showed strong energy under pressure in the stretch. POST MERIDIAN closed resolutely from a slow beginning. ALBANIA had speed in spots. LOVELY GIRL went up on the outside with good speed, but faltered. BOOMING GUNS was caught in tight quarters at the far turn and lost rider.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Tasker. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:15½. Winner, W. M. Jeffords' b. c (3), by Man o' War—Escuina. JEAN BART, favored by the brisk pace battle, came to the outside for racing room entering the stretch and came with a rush on the outside to win going away. CROSSBOW II, in the thick of contention, disposed of others, but could not resist the winner. WHA HAE raced on the inside all the way and was tiring at the end. NIGHT PLAY was hard ridden in tight quarters to the stretch and tired. KNOWING was squeezed back soon after the break and failed to rally. LIBERAL could not keep up after showing fine early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Severn. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:40. Off at 4:42. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUEL, $13.40, $7.70, $5.10; NIGHT BUD, $5.10, $3.60; UNEASY, $4.00.

DUEL, within striking distance at the start, was taken back entering the stretch, came through on the rail and assumed command with a rush and was tiring at the end. RIPARIAN was sent to the front at once, was hard ridden, swerved in the stretch, interfering with NIGHT BUD and UNEASY, for which he was disqualified. NIGHT BUD moved up gamely on the outside entering the stretch and came willingly after foul. UNEASY was faltering after meeting interference in the stretch. PTOLEMY closed some ground in the late stages. THE SCHEMER was rushed up on the outside nearing the far turn and stopped. THE RUNNER was through early.

APERITIF, first in motion, was hard ridden while setting the pace and was being taken in hand at the finish. WISE WILL, a forward factor from the start, came willingly in the final drive, under pressure. DROLL STORY closed with good energy from a slow beginning. PAY RACK raced gamely on the outside all the way. BRIGHT CHANCE went evenly. SUN TEMPEST stopped after running with the leaders. BILL BLEIWEISS stopped. PORTDEN and QUEEN NADI had no chance with the poor start.

Western High Romps to 13-0 Victory Over Eastern in Series

Razzle-Dazzle Play Proves Effective

Running of Weinstein, Snead Pave Way for Both Scores.

INTERHIGH STANDINGS.

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Tech	2	0	1.000
Western	2	1	.667
Central	1	1	.500
Eastern	1	2	.333
Roosevelt	0	2	.000

A Western High team as colorful as its blazing red jerseys outclassed the Light Blue of Eastern yesterday to seize undisputed possession of second place in the inter-high series with a decisive 13-0 triumph. A crowd of 4,000 flocked to Eastern Field to see the Georgetowners win their first game from Eastern in five years.

Flashing a sparkling offense which called for a galaxy of lateral passes, spinners, reverses and shovel passes, the Red Raiders dominated the game from the outset. Coach Dan Ahearn let two of the best backs in the city loose against the Lincoln Parkers in Len Weinstein and Morris Snead and both of them romped for consistent gains all afternoon.

An 18-yard run by Snead in the second quarter put the ball on the Eastern 2-yard line where Blackie Brewer plunged for the first touchdown. Weinstein drove over like a powerhouse for the second touchdown in the last few minutes of play from the 6-yard line, after Phil Crabbe, Western tackle, had recovered an Eastern fumble.

Make Goal-Line Stand.

Not only on the attack but defensively, Western rose to the heights. Against an Eastern team playing far better than it did against Central last week, the Georgetowners proceeded to hurl back every scoring threat, including one which had the Lincoln Parkers on the Western 1-yard line and four downs to go in the fourth quarter.

With only a 6-0 lead, Western had visions of losing the game and passing out of the inter-high race but rose to the situation with a defensive stand which tossed the Light Blue back 4 yards in three plays and finally ended when Eastern just missed scoring as Al Kidwell took a pass from Jack Shugrue out of bounds a step short of the goal line.

Jim Farquharson, Western's great end, continued his smashing play of the Roosevelt and Tech games, and managed to get in on each of the three plays which tossed Eastern back when it was striking for its touchdown.

Kemp Ends Threat.

Western started out by driving to the Eastern 21-yard line in the first period, but Bill Kemp, Eastern's fighting center, ended the march by falling on a lateral pass attempted by Snead. Shortly afterward, Western started its 34-yard touchdown march, after Snead had returned a punt by Gene Davis, Eastern's outstanding ball carrier, 18 yards to the Eastern 34.

With Weinstein picking up 9 yards on one try and alternating with Snead at shorter gains, Western quickly went to the 19-yard line. On the first play of the second quarter Snead cut off left tackle and zigzagged down the sideline before being thrown out of bounds on the 2-yard stripe. Brewer took the ball three times, in a row, going over from the 1-foot line on the third try through the Eastern left guard for the touchdown. Don Niklason's placekick was wide.

Eastern Threatens.

Eastern carried the battle to Western in the third period and with Davis leading the advance went to the 10-yard line right after the second half kick-off, but an offside penalty and Manuel Iglesias, Western's Porto Rican end, tossed the Blue back 10 yards where it lost the ball.

With Davis making an 18-yard return of a punt to the Western 22, Eastern struck again but Western took the ball on the 26 on a bad pass from center. Again the Lincoln Parkers threatened when Camper, Eastern guard, recovered a Western fumble on the Western 11-yard line, after Snead had intercepted a pass on the 10 by Shugrue.

Al Kidwell, scrappy Eastern quarterback, picked up a yard and Shugrue tossed a pass to Moran who fell on the 1-yard line. Then it was that Western tossed back Kidwell on three straight plays, Farquharson figuring in each and making the tackle which lost four yards on the last try. Kidwell then took a pass from Shugrue and fell over the goal-line but he had taken the toss just out of bounds and it was no score.

Brewer then punted 69 yards on a quick kick from his 15 to the Eastern 16 and Weinstein shortly afterward scored again following Crabbe's recovery of a lateral on the 2-yard line by Shugrue which failed to connect. A penalty set Western back before Weinstein smashed over. Eastern's passes in the remaining few moments failed to take the Blue to Western territory.

Out Fishin'

by Jack Hawley

Night fishing under a bright moon is more or less a neglected but very profitable form of angling. If one thinks in terms of ranging fish it is easy to comprehehd why night fishing is a successful and exciting sport. Birds and animals at this season of the year avail themelves of foraging expeditions under a bright moon.

For example take the wild duck who will feed on moonlight nights and sleep during the day or loaf in some game sanctuary like Four Mile Run and vicinity. Many species of fresh water game fish apparently follow this idea by spotting their prey in four or five feet of water by getting a silhouette of moving objects above them.

Watch for clearing water in the upper Potomac and give night fishing a try, especially for bass. Cast a large floating artificial lure around the edges of shore line or sunken weed growths. Manipulate the lure so that it twitches, jumps and darts as if a crippled minnow or mouse. Use your eyes and apply plenty of fish psychology and then pray for luck.

If the weather is favorable by all means try to make a rockfishing trip down to Solomons today or on the first clear opportunity. The bay is litterally alive with them and they are being caught in very large number. Yesterday, O. R. Webster, of Solomons, caught 45 nice rock weighing from two to four pounds, and Capt. Harry Woodburn landed 112 of the same size. In addition, he boated two four-pound trout.

All boats from this area averaged from 35 to 40 rock, some topping the five-pound mark.

One Eastern Shore party landed 300 pounds and sold them to J. C. Lore—more than enough to pay for the sport and leaving some profit for the next fishing trip. Boats are getting scarce, and we advise anglers to make immediate reservations because many boatmen are now using their boats for oystering and will not be on hand unless given sufficient notice of intent to fish. Cove Point and Cedar Point seem to be the best areas for rockfishing near Solomons.

of the five-gaited saddle stallions and geldings.

Other blue ribbons went to Louis Kaiser's Winning Ways, of Bethel, Conn.; J. Macy Willets' Eastertida, Mrs. A. A. Frierson's Regaman, of West Point; the Kilkare Farm's Kilkare Chief, of Elberon, N. J.; Morton Smith's Helium, of Danville, Conn., and Donald Page's team of Queen of the Plains and Queen of the Fields from Far Hills, N. J.

Guarding the advantage built up the first two nights with a perfect performance, the French army team tonight won the first major international military jumping event.

Led by Capt. Pierre Clave, the three French officers finished the three-night competition with a low aggregate of 19½ faults. The United States officers from Fort Riley, Kansas, winner last year, also gave a faultless exhibition as Maj. John Tupper Cole, Capt. Milo Matteson and Lieut. R. W. Curtis, sent their veteran fencers over the jumps. The 23 faults piled up the first two nights still left them trailing the Frenchmen by four faults, however.

Third place went to Canada with a total of 24½ faults. Then came the Irish Free State with 36½, Sweden with 41 and the British with 41½.

Anne Sigman Will Give Table Tennis Exhibition

Anne Sigman, the Helen Wills of table tennis, will appear in exhibition matches each night for one week at the Shoreham Hotel beginning next Monday night.

Miss Sigman holds the national women's doubles championship and was runner-up in the recent world singles championships. She rose to ninth-ranking three years ago in the women's nationals. Last year she finished fifth in that competition and this year second.

Miss Sigman's opponent in the exhibition matches will be 18-year-old Stanley Fields, who won the Eastern States and Boston titles.

Blair Smith, star left end, will be on the injured list with hurts received in the game with Florida and Nick Budkoff, 186-pound sophomore, will take his place.

St. Christopher's 32-0 Victor Over St. Alban's

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6.—St. Alban's, of Washington, dropped its fourth game of the season to St. Christopher's here today, 32-0. The Richmond Saints substituted frequently, 25 gridders sharing in the slaughter.

Billy Fox started the scoring before the contest was 3 minutes old, crashing over from the 5-yard line after Irving Knowles completed a 25-yard pass to Ed Chewning. Knowles added the second touchdown in the first quarter and his placekick was perfect. Woodward, Fox and Wightman scored the last three 6-pointers on line plunges.

St. Alban's lone first down was the result of a penalty against the local team for clipping. Capt. Cary Grayson, St. Alban's quarterback, was unable to play due to a hip injury sustaine din last week's game with Georgetown Prep.

Hilltoppers Meet West Va. Today

School, replaces Dave Noonan at right end; Jim Hill will replace ("Turkey") Tehaan at left guard; Pat Brady will start instead of Clem Stralka; Elmer Moulin will direct the team instead of Tom Keating, and Tony Barabas has been assigned Bob Nolan's half-back assignment. All of the erstwhile regulars will see action, eventually, but those awarded starting roles earned them by their performances against New York University two weeks ago and Shenandoah last week.

West Virginia's attack will be built around Kelly Moan, considered one of the most accurate and dangerous passers in the East. His target usually is Herb Barta, towering end with shovel-like hands. This pair brought victory to the Mountaineers in six of seven games played thus far, losing one to Pittsburgh in a grueling struggle.

This is West Virginia's home-coming game and the largest crowd to see a football game in Morgantown in recent years is expected. Seventy-three high school foootball squads from over the entire State and nearby points in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Maryland, scheduled their own games earlier in the week to be able to see tomorrow's game.

The period between halves will be longer than the usual 15 minutes to permit the staging of a monstar parade featuring floats, marching clubs and various stunts.

Landon Beaten, 18 to 6, By Baltimore Gridmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 6.—The Boys' Latin football team returned to winning form today with an 18-to-6 triumph over Landon High, of Washington. The Latinists played a steady game to win, while the visitors threatened at various times but were unable to solve the smooth-running attack of the host squad.

Landon came into possession of its only score when Channell intercepted a forward deep in Boys' Latin territory in the third quarter and ran 10 yards.

National City League.

Two important National City Football League games will be held tomorrow, with Regal Clothing meeting the Palace A. C. at Duffy Stadium, at 2:30 p. m. and the Trinity A. C. playing the Cardinals at Ballston, Va., at the same time. Regal Clothing is leading the league.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Saturday Morning Quarterback.

Navy vs. Notre Dame—Despite those three beatings in a row for Navy, there is still a great temptation to give the Middies another chance. But, somehow, it requires no great will power, after a study of the records, to pick Notre Dame in this one. Here's luck to the Middies and a vote for the Irish.

POVICH.

Fordham vs. Purdue—The Rams won't be trifling in this game, what with a Rose Bowl trip probably hanging in the balance. Purdue's prowess was pretty thoroughly debunked by that 33-0 affair with Minnesota and, besides, this is no time to hop off a winner. Thus, without fear—Fordham.

Catholic U. vs. West Virginia Wesleyan—One of these days the Cardinals are going to break out in a scoring spree, and it might well be today. Wesleyan did knock off Duquesne, the team that knocked off Pitt, but how do you explain that beating by little St. Vincent. C. U. it is, then.

George Washington vs. Davis-Elkins—There may not be a breath of air stirring this afternoon, but it will still be a breeze for the Colonials. Time was when Davis-Elkins could give G. W. or the other Washington colleges a battle, but anything under a 20-0 score today will be some kind of a triumph for 'em.

Georgetown vs. West Virginia—Here's one that the football pools have hopped on, and they make few mistakes. But, again, this is no time to hop off a winner. This morning, at least, Georgetown is still unbeaten. The Hoyas have been downright sluggish of late, but that cool mountain air should help. One wavering vote for Georgetown.

Maryland vs. Richmond—Bill Guckeyson in the lineup or on the bench, Maryland should be investigated if it loses this one. Down at Richmond there's been a sharp drop in football talent this season, else how come such as Randolph-Macon and Hampton-Sydney tie 'em and F. & M., whoever that is, beats 'em.

Alabama vs. Tulane—The Crimson Tide vs. the Green Wave. Here's a pair of unbeaten crews, still clinging to the hope of a Rose Bowl engagement. It could be a tie, in fact, both teams were tied in early games, but I like Tulane's 28-6 victory over Colgate at New York, Tulane it is, then.

Penn vs. Michigan—Michigan can take it on the chin weekly in the Midwest, but in intersectional games the Wolverines are always dangerous. But Penn this season is out of its doldrums and that 16-0 defeat of Navy is no myth. Penn can win. Methinks it will.

Northwestern vs. Wisconsin—With the Big Ten title in its grasp today, Northwestern won't be trifling. Even if a reaction sets in after its victory over Minnesota, Northwestern can afford a bit of a letdown. No team that has won only one game this season, a la Wisconsin, figures to beat the Wildcats.

Minnesota vs. Iowa—The Gophers can win the rest of their games and still boast of a rather nice season. But a defeat by the Hawkeyes would be almost too much. Bernie Bierman's team is likely to vent a deal of wrath against Iowa today.

Dartmouth vs. Columbia—The Lions' roar is hardly a whisper this season, which has seen 'em lose to Michigan and barely beat Cornell. Dartmouth, fresh from victories over Harvard and Yale, is beginning to roll. Thus, one fearless vote for the Big Green.

Harvard vs. Virginia—The Crimson doubtless surprised even itself by tying Princeton last Saturday, but the truth of that result has been verified. The Virginia team Harvard is meeting today was scheduled as a breather and that is what it now appears to be.

Holy Cross vs. Colgate—Here's one that would be nice to duck. Colgate has been an in-and-outer this season, yet was capable of beating Army. Holy Cross knocked off Dartmouth, then lost to Temple. I'm picking Holy Cross to, ah-er, lose.

Arkansas vs. Rice—George Washington defeated Arkansas and lost to Rice, yet the bookmakers make Arkansas a favorite today. I don't understand it. One vote for Rice.

Colonial Freshmen To Play Westminster

The George Washington freshman team will play the Western Maryland Frosh at Westminster today.

The Colonials have beaten the Naval Training School and lost to the Navy Plebes in two games this season. They have played Western Maryland four times in the past and never beaten the Green Terrors. Last year they tied Western Maryland, the previous years they lost.

Yellow Jackets Drub Eagles By 48 to 7

Locals Score on Aerial; Palisack Runs 93 Yards for R. & M. Marker.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ashland, Va., Nov. 6.—The Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets crushed American University by a score of 48 to 7 here today.

A crowd of about 2,000 watched the winners acquire as many as 14 points in the first period, 6 in the second quarter, 21 in the third and 7 in the final period.

The Americans scored toward the finish of the first half as Toner dropped back for a pass, flipped it to Rogers, who tallied the lone touchdown for the Washington eleven. Howard drop-kicked the extra point.

Al Palisack, of Randolph-Macon, provided the most thrilling play of the game when he contributed a 93-yard run for a touchdown in the third quarter. Palisack intercepted an American pass and galloped just 7 yards less than 100 for the exciting touchdown.

Palisack's performance today made him high scorer in Virginia. He overcame a slight lead held by Wroniewicz, of Roanoke College.

Chrysler Gives Workers Bonus Of $4,000,000

N. J. and Indiana Standard Oil Companies Vote Extra Dividends.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 6.—The business panorama glowed today with news of higher wages and extra dividends.

Chrysler Corporation in Detroit announced a $4,000,000 bonus for some 67,000 employes, to be paid the week of December 14.

May Department Stores, of St. Louis, yesterday increased the annual dividend rate on the company's capital stock from $2 to $3—effective December 1—when stockholders of record November 16 will receive a quarterly payment of 75 cents per share. A special meeting will be held December 28 to declare an extra dividend payable in January "to meet the requirements of the surplus tax act."

A Christmas bonus of an extra week's pay will go to more than 12,500 employes of continuous service since February 1 in company stores in St. Louis, Los Angeles, Baltimore, Denver, Cleveland and Akron.

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey ordered an extra dividend of 75 cents a share in addition to the regular of 50 cents, making a total disbursement of about $32,750,000 to shareholders. After announcing the dividend declaration President Teagle disclosed that the company was making a special contribution of $4,500000 to the corporation's thrift plan for employes, in addition to its regular contribution to the plan.

In Chicago the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana ordered an extra of $1, and the regular dividend of 25 cents, a total of some $18,500,000.

The American Iron and Steel Institute reported that employment in the steel industry in September broke all records for the industry with 526,700 workers on payrolls, compared with 522,400 in August and up 23 per cent from September of 1935.

Allied Chemical & Dye Dissolves Subsidiary

New York, Nov. 6.—Atmospheric Nitrogen Corporation, wholly owned subsidiary of Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, has been dissolved and its assets transferred to Solvay Process Co., another wholly owned Allied subsidiary. This change will not affect the nature and extent of the operations of the plant at Hopewell, Va., which produces mainly nitrate of soda.

Solvay Process Co. is a manufacturer of alkalis and supplies the Hopewell plant with its requirements of soda ash. The Barrett Co., another Allied subsidiary, will continue to market the nitrogen products made at Hopewell.

Post-Election Factors Favor Continued Rise

Capital Goods Are Likely to Show Greatest Relative Gains.

New York, Nov. 6.—In a post-election survey of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Basic factors, such as the trend of commodity prices and purchasing power, should continue favorable in 1937. This being the case, the cyclical expansion in business is likely to continue, as large deficiencies in the durable goods industries still exist.

"The capital goods industries are likely to show the greatest relative betterment next year. Any improvement in the capital goods industries would, of course, benefit the consumers' goods trades, because of the resultant increase in wages and employment.

Retail Trade Stimulus.

"For this reason, further improvement in retail trade is envisaged during 1937, and, as recovery progresses, there will be a gradual shift toward better quality merchandise, luxuries and non-essentials. Retail trade also will be stimulated by continued low money rates, which will facilitate installment purchases. Easy credit conditions will probably play an increasingly important part in the recovery movement as time goes on.

"The upward trend in industrial production will be at a slower pace than in the past year, because comparisons will be made with a much higher base. It is tentatively estimated that industrial activity in 1937 will average about 10 per cent higher than in 1936, whereas the gain this year will probably be in the neighborhood of 18 per cent over 1935.

"Corporation earnings will increase, but also at a slower pace than in 1936."

Mergenthaler Net Increases Sharply

Substantial improvement in the earnings of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co. is shown in the annual report for the fiscal year ended September 30, received by stockholders yesterday.

Net earnings were $637,451, as compared with only $36,160 for the preceding year, equivalent to $2.50 a share, against 36 cents a year ago. This net of $637,451 is after charging $375,000 to depreciation and reserving $65,000 for taxes.

Stock Prices Turn Irregular as Trading Lessens; Government Bonds Continue Rise.

New York, Nov. 6.—Stocks opened strong and after a vigorous hour or two of trading ran into enough profit taking to keep their price changes irregular as compared with the previous day's closing. Sales volume fell with the halt to the advance, falling to less than 3,000,000 shares. Government bonds maintained their strength, although with less vigor. December wheat closed ⅝ of a cent lower at 114⅞ cents a bushel.

The day's news budget helped maintain the little bull movement in stock prices, but it contained enough doubts to prevent any runaway affair. Foreign traders were large buyers on balance, and the professional profit taking here was a partial offset to country-wide purchases based on the hope of a new era of business expansion and also on the stimulus to speculative imagination given by the election outcome and the first enthusiastic response of the stock market to it.

Rising Costs.

Among the leading items of news were announcement of wage increases of 10 to 25 per cent by United States Steel subsidiaries, Bethlehem Steel Corporation and others, the extra dividends declared by a long list of corporations, bonuses to labor voted by Standard Oil and Chrysler, and the corporation reports published that showed large gains in earnings. Reflecting rising demand for raw materials, partly because of the European preparations for war, the domestic price of copper was advanced half a cent to 10½ cents a pound. All that is significant not only of business improvement, but of increased costs of doing business and of rising living costs. Rising costs have their unfavorable side, and especially at this time, when so much inflationary material is on hand, the tendency for a rising spiral of prices to develop must cause some anxiety.

Foreign exchange traders today were feverishly busy as the demand for dollars from London, through which not only British buying but continental purchasing of American securities are cleared, rose sharply. Sterling weakened further under the pressure, and the decline sent the British price of gold to a new high record, some 2 pence above the peak reached last month. The French franc got a severe punishing before the French stabilization fund stepped in, after the French unit had sunk from 4.63 to 4.62 cents, and pushed it back across the 4.63 level. Most of the minor currencies followed the course of the pound and franc.

Rise in Circulation.

Money market rates were unchanged. Private expectations and the action of the bond market give some assurance that no higher rates are likely, but conditions can change rapidly. This week's statement of the Federal Reserve system shows a drop in excess reserves, largely because of a big jump in currency circulation, but the expansion in money came as a result of month end and seasonal requirements and the election. It does not point to anything unusual, although the total currency in circulation now is exceptionally large, in view of present price levels, payrolls and general business activity. It is $624,000,000 greater than a year ago. The total of $6,378,000,000 looks moderate enough, compared with gold reserves of $11,058,000,000, but it covers a good deal of hoarded money.

Actions speak louder than words in the bond market, and the unwillingness of large holders of Government securities to sell merely made large buyers of Treasury issues the more anxious to buy. There was another boomlet, and before noon another dozen or so new high records were recorded in Treasury direct and guaranteed obligations. One of the most impressive demonstrations occurred in Home Owners Loan Corporation guaranteed 3s, which crossed 104 for the first time.

Cheap Money Influence.

The market took lightly President Roosevelt's casual reference to budget balancing, since the possibilities of economies under the present New Deal program are found only in items amounting to about 25 per cent of the total budget, but it was convinced to an even greater extent that cheap money would stay a long time, and that if it remained long Government bonds would go higher.

Profit taking in stocks began in earnest yesterday, but the momentum of the first rush of traders to take hold prevented any real interruption of the advance until today. Although the majority of stocks was uncertain, or definitely weak in the late trading, a number reached new high levels. Motor shares were especially good. Chrysler topped its 1929 best price.

Price advances reached as much as 7 points in spots. American Steel Foundries preferred, with dividend arrears cleared up yseterday, opened 10 points higher, but dropped back. The common reached a new high price. Telephone sold at its best price since 1931, with a jump of two points. Best & Co. was the best of the store stocks. Curtiss-Wright A shares responded to an initial dividend and a better earnings report with a climb of more than a point. Wright Aero ran up half a dozen points.

Gold Shares Rise.

The advance in copper metal prices did not prevent profit taking in copper shares. Silver stocks also weakened, the group losing 1 to 2 points. Mail orders retreated a little. Some of the steels settled back on the announcement of all-round wage increases, but the recession did not take them down far. Rails weakened.

Largely the market was a case of every stock for itself. Standard Oil promptly cut backward on its extra dividend, but Indiana improved a little. Some of the recent fast steppers lost ground. Andes Copper broke nearly 8 points on a few sales and Johns Manville tumbled 2 points, as did Case. Paramount first preferred and Cutler Hammer.

Loews was active and strong. Radio milled around. Pacific and Cannon Mills led a strong textile group. Odd lot dealings were featured by Philadelphia Rapid Transit and Bush Terminal. Most of the utilities improved. Gold stocks hardened.

Gold, Silver, Copper, Tin Markets Boom

New York, Nov. 6 (AP).—Markets boomed today in tin, domestic and export copper, silver and bar gold. Straits tin futures on the Commodity Exchange, Inc., went up 3 cents a pound. Heavy buying abroad lifted the price of export copper to 10.775 cents a pound. Leading United States producers advanced domestic copper half a cent to 10½ cents a pound, the highest since 1930. In London the price of bar gold was advanced 3½ pence to the equivalent of $34.81, a new high for the year. London silver quotations rose to the equivalent of 45.13 cents, or above the United States Treasury price of 45 cents for foreign silver.

Corn Climbs Above a Dollar In Buying Wave

Scores Advance of 5⅛ Cents a Bushel in 2 Days.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—In the liveliest trade seen for months, corn jumped 2⅝ cents a bushel today, up 5⅛ cents the last 48 hours. The steepest rise was in December delivery of corn, which went to $1.00¼, the highest price December has touched since August 19. Enthusiastic speculative buyers put much emphasis on the fact that the 1936 corn crop in the United States is approximately 1,000,000,000 bushels less than a normal yield.

Pneumonia Attack Proves Fatal to Merchant, Philanthropist.

women's wear, he leased the red-brick, brownstone-trimmed building at 1226 F street, next door to what was then Brentano's book store.

At first he occupied only the first floor of this seven-story building, but in a short time business expansion merited the addition of another floor, and eventually prompted Mr. Garfinckel to lease the corner building that had previously been the book store, and to occupy all the floors in both buildings until the fall of 1930, when he built the present Garfinckel store at the northwest corner of Fourteenth and F streets.

The growth of his business is attested by the fact that the firm once had but ten clerks and now has more than 600 employes.

Being of retiring disposition, Mr. Garfinckel has few intimate friends, but his membership in a number of clubs and his connection with various business and civic interprises gave him a wide acquaintanceship throughout Washington. He was a bachelor and in recent years resided at the Hay-Adams House, moving there from the Burlington Hotel. His favorite recreation was horseback riding, and he was a familiar figure on Washington bridle paths. But most of his time and attention were given over to business and civic pursuits.

In addition to his activity as a merchant, Mr. Garfinckel was a director of the Riggs National Bank and the Potomac Electric Co. His business accomplishments, however, did not overshadow his outstanding work in many civic and charitable organizations and movements in Washington.

Many local enterprises have benefited through his leadership or sympathetic support. At one time he was a trustee of All Souls' Unitarian Church, which constituted one of the chief interests of his life. He was a vice president of the D. C. chapter of the Boy Scouts of America, and in January was awarded the "Silver Beaver" for distinguished services to the Boy Scout movement.

Served During War.

He was a trustee of George Washington University, the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, and the Young Women's Christian Association. A Mason, he was affiliated with the Temple Noyes Lodge, No. 32, and held membership in all higher bodies of the Scottish Rite. Recently he was appointed to the men's advisory council of the Animal Rescue League.

During the World War he was a member of the District Draft Appeals Board. Earlier even than that, he became a member of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Though not particularly socially inclined, Mr. Garfinckel held membership in the Congressional Country Club, the Columbia Country Club and the Racquet Club.

Mr. Garfinckel's body now is at the Martin W. Hysong funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. A public service will be held today at 3 p. m. at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets, with Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce in charge. Private interment will follow.

All the active pallbearers will be men with whom Mr. Garfinckel has been associated in his business for the past 12 to 25 years, including William E. Schmid, Harvey J. Cheston, Frank A. Flanagan, Paul H. Firestone, Arthur E. Crow and Jennings Snider.

Gave Much to Charity.

Statements from some of Mr. Garfinckel's many friends, regarding his contributions to Washington's business and civic life, were expressed yesterday as follows:

President Cloyd Heck Marvin, of George Washington University: "Mr. Garfinckel lived an exceptional life in that his sole idea was to serve his community, not only through his fine ability in merchandising, but by maintaining an active interest in his church, in education, and in charity."

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank: "Washington has lost one of its most outstanding citizens. Mr. Garfinckel was civic-minded, charitable and constructive in his approach to all matters involving human need. He was a great success in his chosen work, merchandising, and he was one of the most cultured men I have ever known. I have lost a very dear friend, and the Riggs' Bank, a very able director."

Dr. Paul Bartsch, of the National Museum, acting president of D. C. Chapter of the Boy Scouts of America: "Mr. Garfinckel was for many years one of the staunchest supporters of the Boy Scouts of America. His going is a tremendous loss to us. He was unselfish, a man of broad experience and an exceptional humanitarian outlook. Never was he solicited to make sacrifices for the Boy Scouts, in either time or money, that he did not respond."

Death Came as Shock.

William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co: "The death of Mr. Garfinckel was a great shock to his associates in this company and signalled a most serious loss to the community as a whole. He had endeared himself to all of us. He was most unselfish and extraordinarily civic-minded. While he was a large user of our service, he never failed in all our conferences to stress the need of the smaller business man. It will be difficult to replace him as a business associate and as a companion."

Dr. Percival Hall, president of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf: "Although Mr. Garfinckel had served as one of our trustees for only a short time, we considered him one of the most valued members of our board."

Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, president of the Y. W. C. A.: "It is with deep regret that the Y. W. C. A. learned of the death of Mr. Garfinckel, who became a member of our board of trustees in April of this year and has shown a real interest in our work. His passing will be a distinct loss, not only to all the organizations with which he was connected, but to Washington as a whole."

Television Test Shows Success Of New Medium

Post Writer Praises Clarity of Images After N. Y. Demonstration.

By John Heiney,
The Post's Radio Editor.

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Co. showed all and told all today—revealing the story of television insofar as R. C. A.'s years of engineering research and development permitted.

No promises were made as to when television might be expected for home use. Scores of newspapermen from near and far assembled in a special audition room for a demonstration only.

If the unqualified question: "Did you find television as demonstrated today satisfastory?" the answer would be a firm "yes."

N. B. C.'s experimental television transmitter is located atop the Empire State Building. Its studios are in Radio City. As performers appear at Rockefeller Center, the broadcast of sound and sight is carried to the Empire State Building transmitter and thence returned by the air to the receivers for audition purposes set up only a few floors removed from the source of the programs.

Tested at 25 Miles.

The transmission thus covered a distance of a few blocks. However, it was made clear in the opening talk by R. C. A.'s president, David Sarnoff, that experiments have been successful over a distance of 25 miles and in one instance of 45 miles. Receivers at present are closely guarded. They are installed only in the homes of trusted employes close to the experimental work.

The images were cast on a "screen" 8 by 12 inches in size. A green tint appears on the images. However, President Lohr, of N. B. C., made clear that other tints can be obtained, if desired, by use of other chemicals.

The subjects for the special press audition ranged from newsreel film to live artists. Inasmuch as the guests were not invited to the studios from which the program was originating, a part of the demonstration itself consisted of "sound pictures" from that room showing how the camera operated and how the artists "worked" in television

Variety of Subjects.

Hildegarde sang, the Ink Spots did a novelty number and a tap dancer served as the illustration of how sound and sight merged in the studio to give television. Ordinary film such as seen in the motion picture theater filled out the demonstration.

What was it like? A reaction can not be hastily provided. It must be remembered first that the image on the receiving set "screen" is tiny compared with the image seen in a picture theater. However, in each case the image was clear, without distortion or fading. Each artist and speaker was as readily identifiable as though he were in a movie short.

Change overs from one part of the studio to another or from one artist to another required a momentary "slipping" of the image in much the same manner as in the theater when a frame of a picture shows up for a few seconds as the film adjusts itself.

Movies Clearer Cut.

The images are not so clean cut yet as those on the film screen. Yet they are so far superior to what one would expect that the demonstration today can only be termed as thoroughly remarkable. Whatever is lost in comparison with the theater's screen is due only to the necessarily small receiving set screen.

The image actually is produced on the top of the receiving set and a mirror on the under side of the lid reflects the image-screen when the lid is tilted up. A double row of knobs on the front of the set control the sound volume. Knobs controlling the image are on the top. By these controls the width or depth of a performen can be changed, so if you do not like your singer very fat, you can manipulate a knob a bit and narrow him down.

Frigid Wave Grips Midwest, Kills One

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP).—A cold wave, formed in the zero zone near the Canadian border, moved into the Middle West tonight. Forecasters charted its southeasterly course and warned Central States against a sharp drop in temperature.

The wintry spell visited most of its severity upon the Northwest. Havre, Mont., reported a reading of 10 below zero; Williston, N. Dak., 6 below; Devil's Lake, N. Dak., 2 below, and Bismarck, N. Dak., zero.

Many of the Northern States, from North Dakota to northern New York and Vermont, were burdened by heavy snow.

Temperatures ranging down to possibly as low as 20 above in northern Illinois and to 10 above in the northwestern sections of Wisconsin were predicted by the Weather Bureau.

The first cold death of the season was reported in Kentucky.

Funeral Service Set Tomorrow For Dr. Wilfley

Capital Pastor 69, Leader in Civic Affairs, Died Thursday Night.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. for the Rev. Dr. Earle Wilfley, pastor emeritus of the National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle, who died Thursday night in Emergency Hospital.

Dr. Wilfley had been in failing health for several years. He was 69 years old. The services will be held in the National City Church, followed by interment in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Active in many fields as a philanthropist and religious leader, Dr. Wilfley was one of the city's most popular clergymen. He came here in 1910 as pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church. In 1930, membership of this church was absorbed by the National City Christian Church.

A year later, after sponsoring the new edifice, he resigned because of ill health.

During the World War, Dr. Wilfley served as chairman of the War Service Committee, composed of representatives of the Jewish, Roman Catholic and Protestant faiths, which was authorized by the War and Navy Departments. He was also a member of the food administration, which was headed by former President Hoover.

As chairman of a special committee, he organized the Federation of Churches and later served as its president.

Dr. Wilfley was a native of Kansas City, Mo. He was educated at Bethany College, W. Va.; Columbia University and the University of Chicago. He held degrees of bachelor of arts, master of arts and doctor of laws. As a noted scholar, he was an authority on Shakespeare and before entering the ministry followed a career on the stage. He was a member of the famous Booth and Barrett company.

Dr. Wilfley's first pastorate was in Minerva, Ohio, where he met and married Miss Bertha V. Elder. Other pastorates included Crawfordsville, Ind., St. Louis, Mo., and Bethany, Pa.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and delivered dedication speeches at corner-stone ceremonies of the House of the Temple and at the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Grand Lodge of Masons in the District.

Dr. Wilfley was a member of the ministerial council of the Central Union Mission and the excise committee of the mission's advisory council.

His other affiliations included trustee of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, trustee of Bethany College and the National City Christian Church, a member of the Washington Ministerial Association,

Alabama Girl Finds Mother After 18 Years

Adopted as Baby, Virginia Park Had Believed Parent Was Dead.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Ga., Nov. 6.—Pretty 18-year-old Virginia Park was reunited tonight with the mother she grew up believing to be dead.

They met at the home of Virginia's newl found grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hogan, near Kingston, 13 miles north of here.

"We're both so happy we don't know what to do," the brown-eyed girl who was adopted by an Anniston, Ala., family at the age of two weeks said. "It seems like a story book and it's a problem getting to know all my new relatives by name."

Virginia was born in Anniston, Ala. When she was two weeks old her mother became critically ill and the Rev. and Mrs. David Park adopted her. Afterwards the minister, president of a Presbyterian school for boys, moved with his family to Birmingham.

Virginia's mother, who then was Mrs. Eva Harper, moved back to Georgia and was divorced. Later she married her present husband, J. W. Knight and letters addressed about the daughter by the Parks to "Mrs. Harper" never reached her.

The girl grew up believing her mother dead, and her mother was not sure the daughter still was living.

Then Virginia recently learned her mother was alive and came here in search of her only to learn that the very same day her mother had moved from her nearby farm home to Boaz, Ala., where Knight was promised a job in a sawmill.

Virginia communicated with two newly found uncles here, and they tried to locate Mrs. Knight at Boaz. The attempt failed. Then they learned the Knights had stopped in Kingston to visit with Mrs. Knight's parents, and Virginia hurried there today.

Sister of Teacher Found Dead Here

Miss Maude McPherson, a teacher, of 1646 Hobart street northwest, returned home early last night and found her sister, Mrs. Grace Landis, 57, hanging in the basement, dead.

Police said that Mrs. Landis, who is from Gary, Ind., was hanging from the banister of the cellar stairs. A cord around her neck, evidently part of her dress, was tied to the banister.

Miss McPherson told investigators her sister had been suffering from nervousness and that she had asked her to visit Washington, believing a change would benefit her. Mrs. Landis' husband is in Gary.

Privy Council Ponders Canada New Deal Law

London, Nov. 6 (AP).—The judicial committee of the Privy Council today began hearings on appeals arising from Canada's invalidated "New Deal legislation."

The measures, passed by the Bennett government and voided by the Canadian Supreme Court, dealt with labor and unemployment problems.

One was an act providing for one day's rest in seven. Others were acts providing for a 48-hour week, minimum wages, unemployment and social insurance. The Privy Council also was asked to decide on validity of the natural products marketing act, the farmers' creditors arrangements act and the Dominions trade and industry commission act.

Society Woman Suicide.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Roy Campbell, socially prominent in San Antonio and wife of Roy Campbell, former United States collector of customs for this district, was found shot to death in her home today.

A verdict of suicide was returned by Justice of the Peace Bat Corrigan. Campbell said his wife had been in ill health.
